Morigage loans comprise the chief investments of the Columbia Life & Trust Company, and a large part of the company's nearly five hundred thousand dollars of assets is so loaned in this city. Being a Portland institution and interested, as no foreign company can be, in the growth of the city, the officers profer, when surrounding conditions are favorable, to make loans to persons who use the funds for home building. Home owners are substantial and desirable citizens, and each new residence adds to the growth of the city. Portland citizens, who appreciate what the Columbia Life is doing for the city, should realize that any life insurance business which they can turn to this company, will be equally appreciated by its officers. The current year is proving the most prosperous in the company's history. S. P. Lockwood, vice-president and general manager; office, ninth floor, Spaiding building.—Adv.
