Leard's Error Costly.

An error by Bill Leard at second for the Oaks ultimately gave Portland the game. With the score 1 to 1 in the eighth Bill booted Davis' grounder and let the demon Walla Walla recruit make first, his third time for the game. Davis thereupon stole second and from that resisting registered the winning of that position registered the winning run on Derrick's second two-base swat

Bill Malarkey really twirled a win-ning game. He was nicked for seven hits, but two or three of them were decidedly scratchy.

Derrick whacked in Portland's first tally in the sixth inning after 50 minutes of brilliant no-score battling. Davis opened with a slow hit to third. Charbourne beat out a tiny hit in front of the plate, neither Rohrer nor Malar-key calling for the ball. It was then Derrick begun his afternoon's rampage scoring Dayls with a line drive off the left field fence.
