New Bills Open at the Vaudeville Houses

Empress. WHEN the first act on any bill is good enough to bring an encore it's a safe bet that the show is extra good nine times out of ten. Certainly it's true enough of the Empress bill this week.

To begin with two "tunatics" outside an asylum bend and twist their bodies as bodies never were twisted before, and afterwards proceed to show some rare half-arm balancing and other strong-man effects. Billy Sheer is next. Mr. Sheer is strong as the Hebrew comedy, dresses neatly, sings quite a nice song or two and "went down" with the audience. Followed some Scotch comedy in "The Coxcomb of the City" and "Polly Pulls the Strings" type. There is a plot that has to do with a concealed bed, a wild night with mother and sister but away and the sudden and needless to say unexpected return of the couple which leads to complications.

Musical comedy gave of its share when Fletcher Morton and Maude Earl arrived on the scene. Clever songs with some delicate humor to them and dancing were the offerings. A demure, diminutive and magnetic little girl, The Gypsy Countess, brought down hearth and home with her wonderful playing of the organ and piano. From classical to latest rag, the artist ran the gamut. A great ovation greeted her at the close. Last but not least of all is a musical operetta, "The Mission Garden," with lots of comedy to it, good singing, clever acting and plot. Singing, acting and scenic effects all are good. The American engineer, the English magnate and the pride of the mission, "California," shine most of all.

Pantages. THEY forgot all about the Black Hand at Pantages yesterday and gave the glad hand with a vengeance to an Italian in the play "A Day at Ellis Island." At least it wasn't an Italian at all really, just a wonderful piece of character work by Maurice Samuels, but it was so true to nature and so realistic that the audience clapped to its feet, whistled, shrieked, clapped and called time and again for the actor. Not for a long time has Pantages had such a good offering.

Another good act is that of the fashionable baritone, Tom Kelly, whose re-appearance was the signal for a storm of welcome and cheering from the ardently inclined young bloods. Kelly's songs are good, his voice is a rich, full baritone, his jokes new enough to make a good offering, and he laughs loudly while his clothes of course were the latest.

The Aldo Brothers open the bill with some of the best of the world's championship wrestling exhibitions. This is by far the best part of the show. Boris Fridkin's troupe of Russian singers and dancers are quite a novelty. They have glittering clothes, sing well in unison, dance in the latest fashion, with all the typical Russian music, tambourines, cries and so forth, and keep the audience watching their movements all the time.

There is only one poor act on the bill, that of Connors and Edna. The man attempts a song, which is foolish of him as he has no voice, the only fair to medium part of their act being a rag song by the girl.

WERLEIN TO TAKE STUMP

University Buildings Declared to Be Crying Need After Investigation. Following an investigation of building conditions at the University of Oregon, J. E. Werlein, of Portland, returned to the city yesterday with an announcement that he plans to take the stump in support of measures providing new buildings for the university, which are to be voted upon at the special state election, November 4.

"I found," said Mr. Werlein yesterday, "that conditions are worse than portrayed in the newspaper articles. The school I looked over the campus and found that the school is overcrowded. There has not been any new construction at the institution in six years and much needed repairs have been sadly overlooked. No more meritorious measures could be presented to the public than those providing for new buildings for the institution."

Mr. Werlein made the investigation at the instigation of several clubs and fraternal orders which he represents.

MARY MARBLE and Sam Chip are here again.

At the Orpheum this week that irresistible pair of Dutch kiddies are frolics, singing and dancing their way into every heart in their new little picture-book play, "The Land of the Dukes." Miss Marble has the same rippling never-to-be-forgotten laugh, and she sings the cutest "country-girl" song, but the audience won't let her go until she has had a good long "feminine" ditty. Sam Chip is witty, funny, blithe and gay. John W. Dunne, as the Burgomaster, is capable in his part as the usual funny character. Hoffmeister (Mary Marble), Ben Dickson is the gardener, and Gretchen Google Eyes—but that's a secret. The sketch is a good one, with a name of an impish windmill, Dutch boats and a tulip garden in evidence.

Another gem in the excellent bill is the safety playlet "Drying," in which Agnes Scott and Henry Keane are "man and the maid." The setting is a pretty orchard with the fruit trees all ideal, showing the fruiting of a blossom. Miss Scott is chic in her peach-blossom gown, just a natural lovely girl. She is the author of the sketch, which is the clean kind that makes an appeal.

James Conlin, Lillian Steigel and Eddie Carr are three mirthful young people who can't help being funny. Their act is full of ginger and creates roars of laughter.

A first-class novelty gymnastic feature is presented by Anker Brothers, who are strong men with a bunch of brand new feats of daring. There is a clean-cut act with every detail carried out with military precision. Pealson and Goldie with their ability to sing, dance and whistle make a hit, and Andrew F. Kelley in his story-telling and entertaining is the Irishman to perfection.

La Vier, dauntless trapeze artist, makes the audience gasp in his daring doings aloft.

Motion pictures of the greatest up-to-date events and an orchestra that plays inspiringly round out a first rate show.

plot and introduces some dashing specialties. Billy Onslow and Gus Leonard, as Brady and Schultz, are the fugitives who are afraid of the authorities of New York. A cabdriver whom they had employed to drive them home had overcharged them, and as a result was beaten up and left apparently dead. The two flee to South America. Colonel Bowler, an American officer, is on the same vessel on his way to be Consul to Manana. Arriving there he finds his friends have been put out of office and he is most unpopular, so gives over his commission to Brady and Schultz.

Frank Conter does good work in the dual role of the American officer and the Mexican General. Oliver Bundy, a new character man, makes a hit as Jose Vasquez. Madge Carrage is the delectable Miss Pinkerton. In the second scene she appears in short skirt and bolero and makes a fascinating little senorita. Dorothy Raymond has two parts to play, first as a young American, then as a charming Spanish girl. Her solos are alluring with vim and sweetness of expression.

The roscubids appear in various costumes. Particularly attractive are their shawl drapes (that's all they wear). The finale shows the entire company with the fugitives pardoned, lovers united and the chorus in middy suits singing happily. Chorus girl contests will be held tonight and Friday.
