Greatest Sport in the World Makes Its Home in Portland This Winter

There isn't a man in Portland, who has lived in a country where ice skating was a regular winter sport, that isn't right now picturing himself doing a few fancy stunts on the ice this winter. His mind travels back to boyhood days and the old steel skates, and the quick get-away from the shore and the rush down the river with the fellows in hot pursuit. Then, too, he remembers the games of hockey and "shinny" and the other kindred sports that made life worth while and winter a joy.

Big Crew Rushing Hippodrome to an Early Completion

The largest ice hippodrome in the world is now being rushed to completion at Marshall, North and Twentieth streets. It will have every known device making for comfort and convenience. The skating area will be absolutely unbroken by posts—there will be seating space for over 5000 people—quarters for skating clubs, and instructors in charge to help the beginners. The opening of this magnificent structure will take place in December of this year, in ample time for a whole winter's fun.

Portland Ice Hippodrome Wilcox Building

It is the intention of the management to engage the best band in Portland, and make the concerts an attraction in themselves. Session hours will be observed in the morning, afternoon and evening. The morning hours will be a splendid time for the children and beginners, and many matinee skating parties will be held in the afternoon. The evening hours will, of course, be attended by the general public. The endorsement of local medical men of the advantages of skating as a most beneficial form of exercise has done much to create interest in this new sport for Portland.
