MISS HOBBS FINDS WASHINGTON SLOW

Getting Action in Federal De-

Representative of Governor of Or gon Must Make Appointments Far in Advance to Reach Cabinet Officers.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, Oct. 30,-First impressions are not always wrong, as Miss Fern Hobbs, private secretary to Governor West, of Oregon, is ready to attest. Miss Hobbs recently came to Washington as personal representative of the Governor to adjust several Oregon land matters that have been long nending before the that have been long pending before the Interior Department. She quickly dis-covered that the Government at Washington is a slow-moving machine, and this impression has been growing on

The duties imposed on Miss Hobbs which the wheels of Government re-volve here in the National Capital. Officials' Time Much in Demand.

Miss Hobbs, after reaching Washing-ton, had conferences with several memhers of the Oregon delegation and then started out to visit various Depart-ment officials with whom she had business. She found, on the occasion of her first call, that there is a heavy demand on the time of the higher Government officials and that unless interviews are arranged in advance little time can be secured, even to present such important questions as those she brought with her to Washington. Next day Miss Hobbs discovered that Government officials in the higher of fices are so burdened with work that they cannot carry in their heads the details of all business which passes through their hands, but are obliged to rely largely upon clerks and sub-ordinate officials who specialize on the different classes of departmental work. Before one of the high officials can discuss a case intelligently (unless it be one fresh in his mind) he must, of necessity, call in his subordinates. This means delay.

Miss Hobbs was soon convinced that no public business can be transacted in Washington in a hurry. The Government departments here do not work as rapidly as the smaller offices in the field; the machinery is more cumbersome, there are more officials to consorre there are more officials to consorre there are more officials to consorre some; there are more officials to con-sult, more records to pry into, more re-ports to be searched. More than this, Miss Hobbs has discovered, that interviews cannot be had at any time de-sired. Frequently there are delays of a day, two days, or even longer.

Speedy Action Impossible. Those having business with the partments, however, are treated with courtesy, and are afforded opportunity to present their pleas and arguments whenever apportunity affords, but even the representative of a Governor of one of the sovereign states must compete with Senators and Representatives when seeking an interview with a Cab-inet officer and in Washington the Senator and Representative has rightof-way over everyone else.

tered Miss Hobbs is not complaining. She came to Washington prepared to spend several weeks in discussing Ore gon land matters with the Depart-ments. She has been convinced that she cannot remain in Washington for the final adjustment of the vari questions she is presenting, for to so would compel her to spend the Winter at the National Capital, and there is no assurance the various issues will all be disposed of by Spring. Some have been pending for five to 10 years, and such old matters are always slow of adjustment.

However, Miss Hobbs is hopeful, be-fore leaving Washington, of being able to pave the way to adjustment of all the affairs presented by her, and if she can accomplish this much she will feel well repaid for her journey.

The enormity of her un-address by Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, dertaking, however, has never stag-gered Miss Hobbs in the least. Her one complaint is at the slowness with an end tonight the fifteenth triennial council of the Congregational churches in the United States. The council is regarded as one of the most import-ant in the church's history. It adopted a new constitution, appointed a gen-eral secretary with enlarged advisory powers, brought the eight church soclettes directly under the guidance of the council and provided for biennial meetings. BURLESON WILL STANDARDIZE ENTIRE POSTAL SERVICE.

Postmaster-General Divides Country Into Three Groups for Reorganization Under Experts.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30,-Postmaster-General Burleson has decided standardize the entire postal service, so far as possible, with a view to greater efficiency. To this end the department will operate several model offices, "dynamos from which to charge the entire system of offices throughout the country." These offices will be used to discover the best prac tical way of administering the postal methods that may prove of value.

'In reorganizing the field service for this work, the country has been divided into three groups, the Atlantic States, the Middle West and the Pa-cific Coast. It is proposed to send immediately two postal experts from Washington to each of these divisions, who will co-operate with postoffice inspectors in a study of conditions at designated offices with a view to re-organizing the ciercal forces on an efficient basis. efficient basis.

The investigations will cover every phase of the service, including collec-tion of mail, methods of handling in postoffices and on trains and final de livery.

"In this way," the Postmaster-General said today, "postmasters of all classes will have the benefit of the discoveries at the more important offices and a material betterment of the postal service throughout the country must result."
