

APPEAL MADE FOR IRISH LANGUAGE

Lord Ashbourne, Addressing Gaelic League in Dublin, Criticises Anglo-Saxon.

ENGLISH CALLED INSULAR

Speaker Declares Day Is Coming When Representatives of Press Will Have to Know Ancient Tongue to Continue Useful.

DUBLIN, Dec. 8. (Special.)—Lord Ashbourne made an appeal for the study of the Irish language...

He argued that it was better to teach Irish children at school their National language than intermediate French or German...

"He is the most prejudiced, insular, narrow-minded and impossible person the world has ever seen," he added.

English Dying, Is Assertion. An English atmosphere, his lordship asserted, was essential to an Englishman abroad before he managed to live.

A woman once told him that English should be spoken with the lips. When a language began to be spoken in that way, it meant that it was preparing to die or to emigrate.

The French language was largely connected in its origin with the Gaelic languages, and there was not a word in French which was not in Irish.

Another question was whether the Irish language was to be spoken in Ireland with an Irish vocabulary or with an English vocabulary.

LLOYD-GEORGE LAND PLAN IS ATTACKED

Papers Call Ideas Advanced in Swindon Speech Revolutionary.

"OLD HORROR" IS REVIVED

"Policy Would Rejoice Hearts of Socialists," Is Comment—"More Promises," Asserts Daily Mail in Editorial.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Lloyd-George's land reform speech at Swindon has set the Unionist newspapers writing about the Chancellor of the Exchequer in terms which recall the flogging of four years ago.

The Daily Telegraph "shudders to think" what the new authority will do; the Yorkshire Post can recall only one parallel to it—the famous revolutionary tribunal set up in Paris to bring on the Reign of Terror.

The Daily Mail says that Lloyd-George's speech may best be summarized as "more promises" on a scale which eclipses all his past achievements in that direction.

Lloyd-George's programme cannot take effect until after the next general election.
