Distinct and noteworthy is the place occupied by "King John" among the historical plays of William Shakespeare. While historians agree that it ranks next in quality to "King Henry IV" and "King Henry V," and while the sorrows and death of the young Prince Arthur, which have brought forth more tears than any of the tremendously sad stories with which the Tudor drama abounds, it scarcely has been a favorite with actors.

King John is a character powerfully contrived and drawn with a firm, fine hand, but few actors have brought forth more tears than any of the tremendously sad stories with which the Tudor drama abounds, it scarcely has been a favorite with actors.

Robert Mantell, who opened his week of Shakespearean repertoire last night at the Hellig, has the sublime courage of his dramatic convictions. His production of "King John" was highly satisfying, contemplated from the acting and scenic standpoint.

"King John" contains, in addition to a great many subordinate characters, each a masterpiece in his small way, four dominating characters of the highest order. These are, beside King John himself, the illegitimate Robert Faulconbridge, the young Prince Arthur and his mother, the widowed Constance.

Despite the known truth that John, this worst of the Angevin Kings, is too infirm in spirit and lacking in purpose and that he is too deeply and wholly pitiful to be the pivotal figure in the story's action, Robert Mantell makes him memorable—makes us feel even affection and a wee bit of sympathy for him. His dying scene is intensely dramatic, and the lines in which he unburdens his mind to Hubert de Burgh concerning the murder of Arthur—passages that are truly the most wonderful psychological study in the range of Shakespeare's drama—are made vibrant and climactic.

Fritz Leiber draws a fine picture of Faulconbridge—a character in the story who makes the friends of John's shortcomings. Mr. Leiber portrays this turbulent buoyant and martial spirit, the reckless daring and devilry of this most devoted and patriotic of warriors, with passionate grace and a vehement utterance.

A San Francisco actress, Thais Lawton, who has led into prominence in New York the past two seasons, is Constance, a role that has been called the "jewel" of "King John." Of all Shakespeare's galleries of mourning queens, Constance is perhaps the most intensely dramatic. Miss Lawton entered wholly into the role.

Genevieve Hamper was Prince Arthur. She is slight and young, and beautifully fitted the role. Meltingly irresistible, she made her appeal to Hubert, and the harrowing appeal in which Arthur's eyesight is to be destroyed was one of great pathos. John Burke was Hubert.

Genevieve Reynolds, an actress of distinction, excellently played the role of Queen Eleanor, mother of John. Guy Lindsey, as Lewis the Dauphin; Ethel Mantell, the remarkably pretty young daughter of Mr. Mantell, as Blanche; and Walter Gibbs, as Philip, King of France, were other important players. Tonight Sir Edward Sulway Lytton's "Richard III" will be given.

MURDER TRIAL TO BEGIN

Harry Clark to Answer Charge at Oregon City of Slaying Indian.

OREGON CITY, Or., Jan. 12.—(Special.)—Harry Clark will face trial in the Circuit Court tomorrow on the indictment charging him with the murder of the Indian chief, Henry Yelkie, near Molalla several months ago.

According to Sheriff Mass, the two were seen together last and witnesses are said to be prepared to testify that the two had quarreled. The footprints by the side of the body, when Yelkie was dragged across the road, were those of Clark. It is said, and the shoes that he had on at the time of the arrest fitted exactly into the marks on the dusty ground.

DEATH GUIDES LOCOMOTIVE

Engineer of Fast Milwaukee Train Expires at Throttle.

SEATTLE, Jan. 12.—While driving his engine 53 miles an hour, George S. Perry, engineer of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul's fast overland train, the Olympian, dropped dead of heart disease at his throttle today.

Death occurred soon after Perry had won a race with a train on a rival road which parallels the Milwaukee's tracks near Easton. After Perry's train had passed its rival, W. A. Holton, the fireman on the engine, looked across the cab and saw that the engineer was dead. Holton took Perry's place and drove the train to Laconia.

WILSON ANNOUNCES PARAMOUNT ISSUES

Anti-Trust Law, Then Rural Credits, Is Work Requested of Congress.

HOPE IS TO KEEP PROMISE

Nation's Executive Tells Newspaper Men Reform Legislation Has Been Studied During Vacation as Being Most Important.

ON BOARD PRESIDENT WILSON'S SPECIAL TRAIN, Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 12.—Anti-trust and rural credit legislation are considered of paramount and immediate importance by President Wilson.

Although the influence of the executive will be exerted in behalf of other measures as well during the present session of Congress, he indicated today, in a conversation with newspaper correspondents aboard his train that in the immediate future these subjects would occupy the forum of public attention.

Vacation Used for Thought. The President clearly showed that these reforms in particular had been on his mind during his vacation. Besides sketching his trust message, which will be brief, Mr. Wilson studied the report of the commission that went abroad to study rural credits.

He examined also a bill on the subject prepared by Senator Fletcher, chairman of the commission, and said he had written the Florida senator asking him to confer with him about it.

The President remarked that the bill seemed sound in the main, although he thought some additions should be made.

In giving his attention to the trust and rural credit questions the President feels he is carrying out not only the promises made in the party platform, but is fulfilling an informal understanding with members of the Senate and House who sought to bring the subject of rural credits into the discussion of the currency bill and to prohibit interlocking directorates and other trust evils by provisions in both the currency and the tariff bill.

Trust Message to Be Read. The President is planning to devote the remainder of the week to consultations with members of his Cabinet and leaders in Congress and will read his trust message to a joint session next Monday.

The President said he was unadvised on late developments in the Mexican revolution. He seemed somewhat annoyed that Charge O'Shaughnessy should have been drawn into the ill-fight recently in press reports that the Charge was not in harmony with John Lind and the Washington Administration.

The President had pointed out previously that when Mr. Lind visited him the work of Charge O'Shaughnessy was mentioned only in the most favorable terms.

The train ride today was a restful one for the President and his family. Few stops were made, but at many of the towns and cities the special was run through slowly while the President stood on the platform and waved his hat in response to the cheers.

The President will arrive in Washington early tomorrow.

J. BYRNE IS DEPORTED

"PROMOTER" WITH PORTLAND RECORD, SENT FROM BUFFALO.

Action of United States Officials Believed to Mean Man Must Face English Charge.

J. Byrne, who had offices in the Corbett building from January to June, 1912, and who advertised himself as a peerless promoter, who could act as financial guide for "electric railways, public utilities, water, timber and industrial and mining enterprises," has been deported from Buffalo, N. Y., as an undesirable alien.

Mr. J. Byrne presents his compliments and begs to say that he and his secretary have arrived at the Portland Hotel, and would be pleased to arrange an appointment, ran the card which Byrne mailed broadcast to prospects on his arrival in Portland. The card gave alleged London and Paris banking connections.

Byrne's system was to get an advance fee of as large an amount as possible from a prospect to pay his expenses while examining and promoting enterprises. He was so successful that he maintained a suite of rooms, first at the Portland and then at the Mulnomah, and cut quite a dash among the spender fraternity.

He went from Portland to Seattle and was indicted for fraud. Byrne was brought to Portland, but before he came to trial for fraudulent use of the mails word was received from Buffalo that he was wanted badly there for his connection with a fraudulent stock-selling concern.

He had a record at Scotland Yard.
