FALLS CITY, Or., Jan. 18.—(Special.)

—Nestling up in the canyon of the Little Luckiamute River, 12 miles nearly due west of Dalias, is the bustling little town of Falls City, its name coming from a 35-foot fall in the river just west of the town. It is reached via the Salem, Falls City & Western Railway, which is operated by the Southern Pasific Company, so it goes without saying that the town has a good service. There are three trains each way every day, and one of those is operated as far as Black Rock, a few miles up the canyon to the west of Falls City.

The Little Luckiamute flows into the canyon to the west of Falls City.

The Little Luckiamute flows into the main Luckiamute a few miles to the southeast, and the Big Luckiamute then flows into the Williamette near Buena Vista. The elevation of the town is 286 feet; its distance from Portland by rail is 73 miles. There is not much farming land immediately adjacent to the town at the present time, but as the timber is cut off there will be a large area of rolling fruit land, and perhaps as good land for such purpose as can be found in or adjacent to the Wil-lamette Valley. Indeed there seems no doubt of the place being a thriving agricultural community within a decade or so. The cut-over lands are offered at a low figure on easy terms, making it even now an attractive place for the home-seeker to investigate

Payroll In $15,000. The present prosperity of the town— and it is most undoubtedly prosperous —comes from the lumber industry, there being a large and well-conducted sawmill right in the town, and two or three logging crews in the nearby tim-ber. On the payrolls of these enter-prises there are nearly 200 men constantly employed, giving the town a payroll of close to $15,000 a month. The papulation of the place by the census of 1910 was 980. Since then the growth has been conservatively estimated at 25 per cent, or say 1200 people at the present time. It will be apparent that a payrol of $15,000 a month in a town of that size gives something tangible to build upon — and, remember, the employes of the timber interests alone

What struck me most forcibly as I cutered the town was the great stocks of goods carried by the four large general stores, the proprietors being as fol-lows: M. Shig, Falls City Mercantile Company: G. W. Brentner and Falls City Lumber Company. I did not inquire specifically, but I judged these houses, combined, carry a stock ex-

Optimism Is Prevalent. Another mighty good omen confront

ed me—every man I spoke to in the place said business was good. Further than this, every mother's son of them seems to think that Falls City will go on prospering and growing. Particularly am I indebted to W. F. Nichols, cashler of the Bank of Falls City, for information relative to the town. He is acting secretary of the Greater Falls City Commercial Club. Mr. Nichols is about as enthusiastic and yet company Loses Suit. servative a booster as I have met for ome time. Dynamite, famine or flood ould not shake his faith in Falls City. He told me that practically every in-dividual in the place feels about the matter the same as he does. It surely does one good to visit such a com-

Before I went to the town I was asked, and asked more than once, if I intended to remain there overnight. I replied that I most certainly did-per-baps two nights. "Don't you do it," said the doubters. "Don't think of such a thing; the hotel accommodations are rable." Perhaps they did not all the same word, but their meaning that the eating would be found horrid and the sleeping worse.

The meals were good, and the beds were good, and the proprietor, J. B. Tawney treated me as well as any landlored could treat a patron. So I do not hesitate to say to travelers that they will be well cared for at the Falls City Hotel.

There is but one newspaper in the town, but the editor and proprietor is one of the busiest and most active men in the profession. He is a veritable pook Bah—and then some. His titles would almost fill a book. For instance, he is an editor, a newspaper owner, City Auditor, Police Judge, Notary Public and real estate agent. He may be several other things. I did not inquire. Anyhow, he seems to stand mighty high in the community and runs a neat and newsy little newspaper, the Falls City News. His name is C. W. Lee. I had a brief chat with him, but he was so awful busy that he sent me back to interview Mr. Nichols. "This is my busy day, and the busiest time of the day," he said, "but here is a copy of The News, which will tell you all about our beautiful and thriving little

The falls in the river create the power for driving the electric light plant, but during much of the year there must be a large surplus of power. The town has a splendid gravity water system which is owned by the town, and is on a good financial basis. The school in the town is housed in a splendid structure. Seven teachers are employed, and classes are instructed up omployed, and classes are instructed up to the twelfth grade. VANCOUVER, Wash., Jan. 18 .- (Special.)-"Well, where are they going to locate the bridge?"

This has been the one big and allabsorbing topic of conversation in Vancouver since the engineers, Waddeli & Harrington, have been engaged. The location is the next step to be determined and there are about 12,000 early today.

SALEM, Or., Jan. 18.—(Special.)—After an illness of several months, Mrs. Jennie Griffin Woolery, wife of R. Woolery, formerly of Portland, died early today.

Some would have the approach on the military reservation, while quite a large number would have it at the foot of Main street, which is but 40 feet wide. counties of Multnomah, Clackamas, Marion, Washington and Yamhill, met here Saturday to discuss problems of interest to the farmers, indorsed permanent improvement of highways, the abolition of the state Senate and the creation of a state market.

Believing that the single house Legislature would accomplish better results for the state and increase the responsibility of the representatives who are sent to Salem, the farmers passed motions indorsing the abolition of the upper house.

W. H. Barzee, of Portland, delivered an address on the subject to the society. He contended that the system of checks and balances had proved itself worthless and that the state needed a better way of placing responsibility.

The convention urged the county courts of the state to construct permanent highways and to build all roads of hard surfaced material.

W. S. U'Ren talked on the marketing of crops and favored the creation of markets in all of the towns of the state where the farmers could drive in and make their trades for the day. Such a plan was indorsed by the convention. The report of the committee showed that the Portland warehouse is in a good financial condition. The next meeting will be held in April in Portland.
