UITE the most important event of Q last night was the dance given by Mr. and Mrs. G. Frederick Sanborn at Mr. and Mrs. G. Frederick Sanborn at Hotel Multnomah. The ballroom, charmingly decked with yellow and white crysanthemums and a profusion of palms, enhanced the kateldoscopic effect of the lovely gowns of the fair sex. The supper room was attractively decorated as a Japanese garden, with masses of lovely cherry blossoms, wis-taria and myriads of softly shaded taria and myriads of softly shaded a bee. He did not see Marian, and she slipped into a chair at a little table by the wall. She sighed with satisfaction. The soft table lights, the deep rug underfoot, the ornate ceiling, the music, were enchanting. She longed for the money to repeat this experience often. Why had she been denied all this, and relegated into the army of mediocrity? She reflected bitterly, enviously, on the trick of birth which had given Mildred so much and her so little. But she thrilled with the thought that now she was free—free to begin life again, to win perhaps what had been denied her, "Pardon me, iffadame," said a voice at her side, ending her reverie abruptly. It was the head waiter. "Are you alone, madame?" he inquired. "Yes," she answered inquiringly. "I am sorry, madame, but the management does not permit ladies without escorts to dine here. I am very sorry. But it is a rule."

The words hit Marian like blows.

The words hit Marian like blows. With a mumbled apology sle made haste to rise. She felt like an ignoramus, like a culprit. She hurried away, her face flushed with shame and embarrassment. She felt as though a glorious feast had been jerked without ceremony from before her.

Her appetite gone, she made a pretense of eating her dinner a little later in a dairy lunchroom, after which she bought a gallery seat at one of the theaters, and strove to forget her uncomfortable experience as the rollick-

M ISS MABEL STEGNER, head of the Domestic Science Department of the Young Women's Christian Association, is planning a new course of les-sons for the husbands of several of the members of the matrons' cooking class. The men will learn the art of carving roasts, fowl and steaks, while the women will prepare the dinners. This course will be introduced at the request of several members of the as-sociation.

On Tuesday night the February birthday party of the girls of the association was held. A clay modeling contest was participated in by the guests and some clever models were made, Music, fortune telling and games were enjoyed. Mrs. Shirley Parker, Mrs. Donald Spencer and Mrs. John Claire Montieth were patronesses of the evening.

Last night the girls' social commit-tee met and laid plans for the enter-tainment and welcoming of new girls in the association. It is the aim of this committee to make strangers feel at home.
