NEW PARISIAN MILLINERY CREATION TRIMMED WITH WINGS

Attractive Spring Hat by Germaine, Paris

A dashing Spring model just received from Germaine, Paris, is an effective combination of straw brim, with satin crown. A smart arrangement of the wings at the side give character to the chapeau. The brim is wide enough to shade the eyes. The satin is of tango shade, the brim in a harmonizing brown and the wings combine both tones and shade into a darker brown.

longer over her reflection in a glass. Marian acknowledged the compliment with a smile, then made haste to disclaim it with, "Do you jolly all of your patients?" "I deny that I was jollying," he protested. "You're beautiful."

"We won't argue," she retorted, suspended midway between pleasure and resentment. "How much do I owe you?" she inquired. "Oh, suppose we say two dollars," he answered. "Two dollars. Is that all?" she asked. She had expected a bill for three or four times that amount. "Are you sure you haven't miscalculated?"

"Not in your case," he answered, with a smile. "I am amply able to pay," she put in quickly. "I didn't mean that. I know you are. But it has been a very great pleasure to do work for you. I hope we shall see each other again."

"Not that you wish me any bad luck at all," laughed Marian. "I hate tooth-ache."

"I need a sore tooth necessarily be the determining factor?" he asked.

"I hope that we shall see each other again," helping her on with her coat. "Goodby, Miss Wintrop," he said, shaking hands.

"I wonder what he meant?" mused Marian, as the elevator descended. But she did know, even though she strove to deceive herself by asking the mental question. What woman does not feel and instinctively understand that when a subtle magnetic attraction, which, going out from her unbidden, sometimes lays hold of men, whether they be married or unmarried?

Dr. Evans was 35, tall, good looking, finely groomed, an engaging talker, and he had grave gray eyes that looked one through. Marian thought of him many times that day. She found herself wondering what his home life was like.

Latest Ripples in the World of Fashion. LEADING Portland shops are showing some smart and becoming new fashions of American design that have precedence over the French costumes.

The French designer thrusts his styles on the American woman in spite of her protestations. The average, "United States" woman prefers "United States" clothes. They are plainer, less expensive and altogether more becoming.

Of paramount importance yesterday was the wedding of Miss Polly Hewett and Lewis A. McArthur, which was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hewett on Mount Zion road, Rev. A. A. Morrison, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, officiated.

The wedding was particularly noted for its charming simplicity and artistic arrangement. The house was decorated prettily with a profusion of Spring blossoms and clusters of pink peated plum and cherry branches.

Miss Margaret Hewett was her sister's maid of honor, and the other attendants were: Misses Margery Hoffman and Eliza Grelle, Little Jane Talbot and Susan Tucker were ribbon bearers and Masters Holt and William Warrens carried the pillows. Roy Page, of Berkeley, Cal., acted as best man.

The bride, a charming, vivacious girl, was gowned in a creation of embroidered chiffon and lace. Her full-length tulle veil was wreathed with orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of white fresas and pink rose buds.

Miss Hewett wore a gown of pink satin and chiffon, trimmed with exquisite old lace. She carried an arm bouquet of Spring flowers.

The bridesmaids were attired in pink satin and lace gowns, and carried pink roses.

Following the ceremony, a buffet supper was served, the table being presided over by Mrs. C. E. S. Wood, Mrs. William S. Biddle, Mrs. William H. Warrens and Miss Walling.

Mr. and Mrs. McArthur left for a short wedding trip to California and upon their return will be domiciled at 407 Clay street.

Mr. and Mrs. James Cole are being congratulated upon the birth of a baby boy.

Miss Margaret Dellinger, of St. Paul, is the house guest of her night, Mrs. Charles Malarky, and later will visit with Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Clark, at Linton.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Edward Grelle were hosts for a charming dinner last night at the University Club, preceding the Monday Night Dancing Club's last dance of the season. The table was decorated prettily with a profusion of Spring blossoms and covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. William Alvord, Mr. and Mrs. William McMaster, Mr. and Mrs. Alma D. Katz, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar R. Menefee, Dr. and Mrs. Otis Buckminster Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Branch Riley, Mr. and Mrs. Bert C. Ball, Dr. and Mrs. Heibert S. Nichols, Mr. and Mrs. Morton H. Insley, Dr. and Mrs. William Henry Skene, Mr. and Mrs. Wells Gilbert and the host and hostess.

The dance given by the Monday Night Dancing Club, last night, was the last of the series for this season, and the attendance was unusually large. A special committee was elected to take care of the dances for the season of 1914-1915.

Mrs. Fred Gordon Buffum and Mrs. Sarah Bradbury Forbes entertained yesterday afternoon with a smart tea. Their residence in Overton street was thronged with beautifully gowned matrons and maidens. The calling hours of four to six. Pretty floral decorations enhanced the attractiveness of the interior of the home. Yellow was the decorative scheme, and was developed with fongolia and tulips, combined with lace ferns.

Presiding at the tea were Mrs. C. A. Lyman and Mrs. Mark W. Gill. They were assisted by Mrs. Harry Coleman and Miss Augusta Marshall. Mrs. Ralph H. Jenkins and Miss Mabel Lawrence were stationed at the punchbowl.

Miss Claire Wilcox entertained about 20 of her friends at a brilliant affair at her residence with an informal dance.

The Multnomah Amateur Athletic Club was the scene of a brilliant gathering of the members and friends last night on the occasion of their annual formal ball. The gowns were a delight to the eye, and the decorations were prettily with palms, ferns and Spring blossoms in a riot of lovely coloring.

The Knights of Columbus, Portland Council, gave their formal dancing party last night at Hotel Multnomah, and it was one of the most elaborate affairs of the pre-Lenten season. The fair sex were attractively gowned, and all the modern dances were featured. The patronesses for the occasion were: Mrs. J. F. Sinnott, Mrs. J. P. O'Brien, Mrs. J. C. English, Mrs. H. C. Bowers, Mrs. F. J. Loneragan, Mrs. M. J. Delamater, Mrs. M. E. Brady, Mrs. P. E. Dooly, Mrs. A. D. McDougall, Mrs. A. C. Smith, Mrs. J. M. Casey, Mrs. P. J. Cronin, Mrs. J. W. Clark, Mrs. E. E. Erskine, Mrs. J. R. Wilson, Mrs. E. Barenstecher, Mrs. R. W. Ward and Mrs. J. Maginnis.

The success of the affair is due to the following committee: Leo W. O'Rourke, Dr. James C. Hayes, John W. MacKinnon, Dr. Thomas J. Fox and Charles P. Duffy.

Mrs. Benjamin N. Wade was hostess for a delightful luncheon on Saturday in honor of Mrs. J. Guy Strom, who will leave shortly for the East. After luncheon Mrs. Wade entertained her guests at a box party at the Hellig Theater. The party included Mrs. Emmet Drake, Mrs. Walter Moore, Mrs. S. Colter, Mrs. J. W. Moore, Mrs. Strom and Mrs. Wade.

Mrs. William Deming Smith, a popular and attractive matron, well known in Portland society, will arrive within a few days to pass the Spring with relatives and friends in this city and will later go South. Mrs. Smith has been in New York during the Winter and has entertained as a house guest Mrs. N. E. Ayer, of this city, for whom she was given many charming social functions. Mrs. Smith long has passed several months out of each year in Europe, where she also is well known in the American colonies.

Miss Mayme Brown will receive a few of her intimate friends informally on Thursday afternoon, complimenting Mrs. W. R. Cody, of Seattle.

Mrs. Walter Bowen, of Seattle, who with her daughter Miss Zillah Ruth Bowen, has been passing the Winter in Los Angeles and San Francisco, returned to Portland Sunday and is at Alexandria Court.

Oregon Rose Camp, Royal Neighbors of America, will be at home on Friday evening to all members and visiting neighbors in the city, at Royal Academy Hall, 85 1/2 Fifth street. The reception committee consists of Mrs. Mae Angel, Mrs. Jessie Barnum, Mrs. Kate Cunningham and Mrs. Lara Coffey.

Invitations have been sent out by the members of the Jewish Young Men's and Women's Association for their second social dance to be held on the evening of March 3 at Muriark Hall.

Little Discussions OF Love and Marriage BY BARBARA BOYD.

"I F we were truly just, or, rather, really merciful, we would punish crimes against the unborn more stringently than we do those against the living, wouldn't we?" meditatively mused the Bachelor Girl.

"It would be a sort of shooting in the dark, wouldn't it? How could we? How would we know we were hitting the mark?" replied the Bachelor.

"Oh, we could do it easily enough if we wanted to. I have just been reading some statistics on the feeble-mindedness. It is increasing terribly, and one of the chief causes of it is drunkenness. Drunkenness could be prevented. And in these murdering more deliberately cruel than to fasten this terrible affliction upon a helpless little child? That's the reason I say there ought to be punishment for crimes against the unborn. The living can defend themselves against those who would injure them, but the unborn have no show whatever."

"How could we do it?" "There are laws to govern or prevent the sale of poisons that would not be there but for the sale of intoxicants and stimulants and drugs that have as bad, if not worse, an effect. One is called murder. But what is the other? It is worse than murder. And it not only clamps feeble-mindedness and such ills upon the absolutely helpless, but is the cause, direct or indirect, of nearly all the crime and poverty from which society suffers. And yet the most of us are perfectly quiet in the matter. In fact, we aid and abet the evil. For we earnestly press these things upon people, as if we were giving them some good. Many of us offer them in some form at meals, or upon social occasions, or else we give them as a relief or remedy for some ill. At any rate, we have a finger in the pie for them, or act as if we did, when we ought to see what an enemy they are, and treat them as we would a rattle-snake, or any other harmful or deadly thing."

"I guess our viewpoint in regard to them really is wrong," reflected the Bachelor.

"It certainly seems to me that way," earnestly responded the Bachelor Girl. "Whenever I see a building being fixed up, or a piece of machinery being put up, or anything attractive for the purpose of selling those injurious things, I think how can we stand by calmly and see our fellow-creatures being injured, or our eyes, for the breeding of crime and poverty and suffering. For that is just what it is. Out from those swinging doors come murder, and theft, and sickness, and hunger, and feeble-mindedness, and almost every evil and sorrow humanity knows. And we say nothing, and do nothing. We won't let those things that kill quickly be sold so easily, so why should we let the things that kill slowly and bring a lot of other evils in their slow murdering? That's what I can't understand. We are supposed to govern ourselves, and to be the better for it, and that is, for the benefit of ourselves. But surely we haven't much sense of what is of benefit to us, or we are awfully stupid."

"It does seem that way," admitted the Bachelor. "But people must be educated. They must be taught, and you can hope for much improvement, but I shouldn't think they'd need any education. Can't they see it for themselves if they use their eyes and their brains? Why is it that it takes people so long to better conditions, when they themselves are to benefit by the betterment? They are not merely economically, and leave out all questions of humanity, to wipe out crime and poverty and feeble-mindedness, but they are to be better, and to have their houses and charitable institutions, and think what a lessening of taxes that would be to them."

"It will come in time," soothed the Bachelor.

"Speed the time," fervently said the Bachelor. "And, let's do all we can to help speed."

Divorced Life By Helen Hessong Fuessle.

The Episode at the Dentist's. Copyright—The Adams Newspaper Service. "SEE we have a mutual friend," said Dr. Evans, as he bent over his tool drawer to select a drill. "Is that so?" inquired Marian.

"Yes, Shaws, one of my patients. I had her in the chair this morning. She was here when you telephoned me, and asked at once if it wasn't Marian Wintrop."

Marian had selected Dr. Evans to do a pressing bit of dental work expressly because he did not know her. Her name, spending money, had made her avoid all of her acquaintances, as much as possible since her divorce. She divined instantly that Mrs. Shaw, who knew her, knew of her divorce, and imparted the information to the dentist. She rebelled inwardly against the unfortunate occurrence.

The more she hesitated drilling began, eliminating further talk. Later, the telephone bell at the dentist's elbow rang. He picked up the receiver. "My wife has forgotten the luncheon engagement. Try to be here at the office at twelve-thirty sharp," he replied. The rest of his conversation consisted of rather curt yeses and nos. He was detained for several minutes, and hung up the receiver with a gesture of impatience.

Marian with her unfortunate habit, he said, turning to Marian, "of insisting on visiting over the telephone during my busiest hours."

value from these if they are made in our own kitchens. We ought, for various reasons, to relish the home-made product by far the better.

"Commercial" relishes, which can be secured for a small part of a dollar per bottle, are rarely safe or wholesome products. Alum is often contained in them, for it will stiffen up wilted vegetables which some other process has puffed out to look natural, or more so.

A little turmeric is often added to make them seem like mustard pickles. A pound of turmeric root at 15 cents a pound would perhaps color yellow a whole hoghead of market pickles liquid, and some commercial mustard perhaps be added to give it a mustard-like consistency.

Let us take an annual report of a state health board. That for Kansas is at hand. Under "Pickles, Relishes, Etc.," in the food analyses of one of its bulletins, we find a considerable number of these described with serial number, brand, manufacturer's name and the conclusion reached by inspectors.

One of the most common conclusions is: "Alum and tumeric present. Illegal." Benzoin is sometimes present, copper filings are present, and a number of specimens the inspection brought out the fact that "turmeric and a considerable amount of aluminum salt" are present. "Soybean, benzoin, alum and tumeric are present, but are declared on the label, illegal." "Pearl" is present. Some reactions showing that sulphites had been used in bleaching the onions, illegal."

In another bulletin there is the following statement in regard to pickles: "Out of 11 samples reported up this time 10 are illegal and eight contain salts of aluminum. One of the other 10 contains salicylic acid, and the second benzoin of soda, without any statement of the amount present."

If we want to eat illegal foods it is easy to do. For the food commission has not yet learned how to impound, but when one really understands about these things it is sad to see people seeing an appetizer by buying for 10 cents some doctored waste product, containing a small quantity of something that is dangerous, and which would have an immediate disastrous result on his health and in small quantities works obscurely to the same end.

The little seed and cabbage have been low in price this Winter and it is easy to make relishes from them. By the following recipe one can get either a cold or hot relish, which is hot one to serve with the vegetables:

Marinated Red Cabbage—Take off the outer and imperfect leaves of the cabbage and cut the inner leaves up into squares as cold slaw. Put into an earthen crock, powder with fine salt and bring to a cold place for two days, stirring often, in order that the salt may thoroughly penetrate the cabbage. By using more salt one can shorten the time to 24 hours.

The sliced onion will be as red as the cabbage and red cabbage. It is a considerable cabbage, enough liquid will be drawn out so that the cabbage will need to be drained, but if only one small cabbage is used, perhaps the salt will only have the effect of making it sticky. Slice one onion or several into the bottom of the crock, tie up some whole pepper, a clove or two and whatever spices you choose, in a bit of cheesecloth and cover the whole with either cold or boiling vinegar, then leave for 24 hours.
