Expert on International Law Does Not Agree With Associates in Administration on Situation Across Border.

WASHINGTON, March 4 .- (Special.) -John Bassett Moore, counsellor for the Department of State and one of the world's foremost authorities on international law, has retired from his posttion under the Wilson Administration

Correspondence between Mr. Moore and the President made public tonight shows that he submitted his resignation February 2 to become effective on the first anniversary of the Wilson inauguration. The international law expert of the Administration retires to devote himself to duties with the Carnegie endowment for international peace, in accordance with a contract entered into two years ago.

He will resume his professorship of international law and diplomacy at Columbia University next Fall, according to announcement made at the State Department.

Differences Cause Resignation

Fundamental differences of view be tween Mr. Moore and the highest officials of the Administration, especially in regard to Mexican and Latin-American policies, are understood to have been the real incentive to resignation, J. Girl Members Will Turn Sleuths. Vandals Who Destroyed 500 Books Suspected.

SALEM, Or., March 4 .- (Special.)-Pastry of all kinds, bread, canned fruit, and in fact everything edible in the do mestic science department of the high school made a feast last night for marauders thought to be students of the school, who entered the building by opening a window.

Their depredations being similar to those at the school one night last week when the books of 500 students were piled in the middle of the assemblyroom floor and ink poured over them, gives rise to the suspicion that the same lads were participants in both.

The theft of last night was discovred when the girls of the domestic science class went into the classroom today. Everything was in a topsy-turvy ondition, cabinets were wide open with their contents missing and bread rumbs were scattered over the floor. Every girl in the class declared that she would do everything in her power to find the guilty parties. Superintendent of Schools Kuntz and the high school teachers are trying to find the miscreants but so far have met with little success.
