Charles Wakefield Cadman, who will appear in lecture-recital Monday evening at the Lincoln High School, under the auspices of the Monday Musical Club, is foremost in the ranks of American composers, having gained his claim to distinction chiefly through his beautiful idealizations of the primitive American Indian music. Into his songs he has woven the fanciful, poetic lore and legends of the red man, and through all his vocal and instrumental compositions run the rhythmic, haunting strains of the wild, free life of forest and plain before the coming of the white man. The Cadman music is in a class by itself, distinctly different in character and with a beauty and appeal veculiarly its own. Adding to the effect of the Indian songs and chants will be the

Adding to the effect of the indian songs and chants will be the appearance with Mr. Cadman of Princess Tsianina Redfeather, a full-blooded indian girl, gifted with a rich mezzo-soprano voice. She is an educated product of the Eufalla Government school, and is said to be very charming in personality, in addition to splendid dramatic and vocal gifts. She aiways wears the picturesque costume of her people, and her passionate devotion to her race finds expres-sion through the beautiful Cadman songs.—Adv.
