FORGERY TERM SHORTENED

Class in Drawing Started in Folsom and E. B. Johnson Says at Least One Pupil Can Qualify for Good Job.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 29.—(Special.)—Having literally cartooned himself out of prison and a four-year sentence for forgery, after less than a year's stay in Folsom, E. B. Johnson has the record of being the first man who ever came from behind prison bars by this method.

When he was arrested in Stockton he had no clear idea of the charge against him and the only thing he remembers of the whole trial, he says, was the sentence of four years, pronounced by the judge after he had pleaded guilty.

Johnson's arrest and conviction followed a tour of the coast from Portland to the Mexican line, which time he himself says was a prolonged period of darkness.

He arrived here today and left today for Portland, where he will take up life as an advertising artist where he left it a year ago.

One of the features of his imprisonment at Folsom was the formation of a class in drawing and illustrating, which has some promising pupils.

"I am going back where I left off a year ago, but I don't expect to get into any more trouble through John Barleycorn. The taste I have had has been quite enough for me."
