BY ROSCOE FAWCETT, SACRAMENTO, Cal., April 1.—(Spe cial.)-One turgid wallop by Arthur Kores, a respected citizen of Milwaukee, Wis., defeated Sacramento 1-0 in the second game of the 1914 Pacific Coast season. The hit was sufficient It salled for a sizzling home run inaide the park and broke up as brilliant a twirling duel between West and Stroud as one could hope to muster in a year's travel from Bankok to Birmingham and back again.

Score: Portland 1, Sacramento 0.
Two men were out and the score was 6-0 in the first of the ninth when the 0-0 in the first of the ninth when the Dutchman strode to the plate. Twice he had fanned hefore, but this time the hard-hitting third baseman braced his slightly howed legs, took one hasty sight at a fast one and laced it on a line far out to the outer works, midway between Left Fielder Schweitzer and Moran in center.

Kores Beats Ball to Plate.

Like a sepulchral cebo from Torreon, the ball came hurtling back to the home plate too late to do any good for the Wolverton cause. Kores had crossed the plate two seconds before and had chalked up for Walt Mc-Credie's champions the second straight Credie's champions the second straight win of the series.

The Dutchman's was a mighty poke, but we must not forget the masterful pitching of both slabsters, Hi West and Ralph Stroud. West, of course, is entitled to most credit of the two. He pitched a resourceful, brainy, well nigh perfect battle. The Senators swung vainly at his curves and fast ones alike. So ably did Hi mix them that only four hits were made against him alike. So ably did Hi mix them that only four hits were made against him in the nine innings, and one of those was a tiny, skinny, insignificant bunt. "Goshamity" and a couple of "phews!" How the bix ex-Cleveland right-hander did stand the Sacramentans on their heads! Two or three times Hi found himself struggling in deep water, through his walks or breaks in the defense, and on those occasions the master mind could be best discerned working in all its splenoccasions the master mind could be best discerned working in all its splender. In the ninth the Wolves had men on first and second, from a hit and Davis' error, but West forced Schweitzer to fly out to short, thus ending the excitement. Davis offset by a brilliant stop in the sixth inning.

Buddy Ryan, Donne and Lober again featured in Portland's batting. The two gardeners garnered two apiece off Stroud, who was depted for seven hits.

Haworth Makes Showing.

Buddy worked all the way to third in the seventh inning on a single to right, Kores' sacrifice and a wild pitch, and then he died there. Lober and Derrick could not bring him in. In the ninth Buddy opened with a line drive against the right field fence, but was caught at second on a perfect throw by Shinn.
