LOCATION OF RESERVE BANKS. Decision of the Federal Reserve ent on the will of the creator. A ing pan into the fire precarious government is exactly As Villa, pressing Board's organization committee and districts for Federal also with careful regard to political and to the states where the committeemen reside. In pursuance of this policy, the ambition of New York City to become the seat of a reserve bank overshadowing all others in volume of capital received scant con-sideration and its field is restricted to its own state, while in capital it is to be surpassed by the Philadelphia, Cleveland and Chicago banks, the last of which will excel all others in this spect. There seems to have been purpose to weaken the position of New York as the financial center of inistration and cropped out in the

Perhaps I ought to explain one phrase or two. The appeal to leave school refers to our young men and women students. They should not waste too much time in over study.
Some of our very best workers have studied neither widely nor deeply. Of course those in official positions in the schools should not abandon their posts for outside effort. They have peculiar advantages where they are.

As to tax exemption: We must not overlook the importance of this. We must have an electorate a majority that only almost and outside the stilled, eliminating overlook the importance of this. We must have an electorate, a majority of whom are emancipated from the financial argument. Uplifting is not wholly a matter of sentiment. The Oregon system requires money, lots of it! But shall we palter? Not while there is a dollar of taxable property left!

Wilson's Mexican policy that only Americans shall be killed, eliminating the Irish and Dutch, there would be nothing to it. Of course, these are only suggestions. I do not anticipate only by Tom Kay and his law-enforcement league.

Woman's Rights.

Woman's rights have given rise to one by two very witty remarks on the part of well-known women of today. "If," remarked that wonderfully clever poetess, Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, when talking of women's suffrage, "the old man had never violated any of his obligations toward women, the new woman would never have existed."

a profitable industry was then beginning to attract the attention of Oregon's farmers. Some of our wealthy and public-spirited citizens established large, highly-priced herds of world-famous dairy cattle for the commendable purpose of promoting the dairy industry whereby the farmers of the whole state could get a supply of foundation stock. Unfortunately for the state and for the promoters of these worthy enterprises, it was discovered that many of these finely bred cattle were seriously affected with tubercuilosis.

losis The public health and Oregon's animal industry were jeopardized by the wholesale invasion of these dangerously diseased animals. The Legisla-ture was apprised of the seriousness of the situation and a law, was enacted which fully met the requirements. It might be mentioned here as a matter of historic interest that Oregon was the first country in the world to pass such progressive legislation giving power to a commission to destroy diseased domestic animals. The law was useless without some one able and willing to enforce it.

was appointed and given full power to deal with the situation. It was con-tended that the law was a dangerous encroachment upon the rights of pri-vate property, which created a feeling of no little opposition, which at times became acute. It required nerve and a high regard for the public service to enforce without prejudice, fear or fa-vor the provisions of such a law. It was neither an easy nor desirable task to go into a farmer's barnyard and in-form bin the service. to go into a farmer's barnyard and inform him that some of his fine dairy cows were badly affected with disease and order them killed and their carcasses destroyed. Farmers naturally took pride in the possession of these fine animals. At that time there was a prevailing ignorance that any harm could come from them. Oregon mothers were innocently feeding their hables milk from these diseased animals. At that early period only men well versed in science and the then newly accepted n science and the then newly accepted
