DERBY STREET USE TO BE URGED AGAIN

George M. Hyland Says He Will Convince Bridge Commission of Its Error.

$100,000 SAVING CLAIMED

Assertion Made That All Interests Will Be as Well Served by Other Approach and Car Service Can Be Competitive.

On a showing that a saving of $100, 600 can be effected by use of the Derby street approach to the Interstate bridge, George M. Hyland, J. J. Fitzgerald and other citizens will go before the Interstate bridge commission this morning and ask for a reconsideration of the action of a few weeks ago that resulted in selection of the Union avenue

Light & Power Company of a single advantage that it now possesses with the exception of the advantage of monopoly in traffic. On the other hand, however, he says that final adoption of the Union avenue route will deprive the standard gauge lines now operating out of Vancouver of an entrance to Portland as it will compel them to go to heavy uscless expense to build a viaduct from Herby street, over which they will have a franchise, to a connection with the new bridge.

Mr. Hyland has prepared statistics

Mr. Hyland has prepared statistics on the cost of the two proposed ap-proaches to show that the saving by use of the Derby street line will be

In figuring the cost of work on the Derby street line he has used the same unit of cost as that estimated on the Union avenue line. He says he has done this to be most liberal in presenting his figures, but that he has offers from responsible contractors to do certain portions of the work at figures that will result in a saving of at least $17,000 in addition to the saving shown by the comparative estimates which he will submit to the Commissioners this morning. On this basis the aggregate saving on the Derby street route, as calculated by Mr. Hyland, would be approximately $100,000. n figuring the cost of work on the
