CAUSTIC ADDRESS HEARD

REV. DAN CRAWFORD, AFRICAN MISSIONARY, SPEAKS TO 3000.

Audience Told That Better Material Conditions Are First Step Away From Religion Usually.

At the White Temple yesterday Rev. Dan Crawford, who has been a missionary to Africa for 23 years, spoke to a large audience.

His talk was caustic, in the main, and he called his audience "silly snobs, veneered with a slight coating of respectability." He said that he would be happy only when he returned to Africa. In New York, he said, "I heard a preacher talking on a sugar candy text, and the audience all sat there and licked the sugar from the candy."

Then Mr. Crawford abruptly broke into his talk with the cry: "Robbers, bandits, and thieves," and declared his audience was keeping the Christian religion from the heathen.

"I haven't been out of the interior of Africa for 23 years," said the Rev. Mr. Crawford. "I borrowed another man's coat to come. I wore a stiff collar for the first time in all those years when I came out of Africa, and I know very well," feeling his throat, "how a dog feels when he has to wear a collar."

"People here seem always to be thinking of getting 'better off.' I find that better material conditions are the first step away from religion. Being 'better off' in a material way is not being 'better' in a moral sense. Quite the opposite."

Rev. Mr. Crawford gave pitiful instances of atrocities among the natives and at the conclusion of his sermon Rev. W. B. Hinson, pastor of the church, called for a second offering. Both were large.

The audience at the White Temple is estimated at 3000. The large anteroom to the east of the regular chapel was thrown open and campstools and chairs placed for the crowd. The galleries were partly filled.

Thirty-two automobiles stood on the corners on which are the White Temple and the First Methodist Church. A number of Easter creations, delayed by the threatening weather of last Sunday were shown, to the dismay of the wearers when the sunny morning clouded up and rain began as the church attendants came out.

Teachers Picnic Hosts.

ASHLAND, Or., April 19.—(Special.)—Yesterday the superintendent and teachers of the public schools were hosts and hostesses to the members of the School Board at a picnic in Ashland Creek Canyon. There was a baseball game and shooting match and over a glowing campfire a substantial repast was prepared.

MEMORIAL SERVICE HELD

TRIBUTE PAID TO WORK OF TWO LATE W. C. T. U. LEADERS.

Careers of Mrs. Lillian Stevens, National President, and Mrs. Edith H. Booker, State Head, Are Lauded.

Tribute to the memory of Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens and Mrs. Edith Hill Booker, the late National and state presidents of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, was paid yesterday afternoon at a mass meeting memorial service in the Taylor Street Methodist Church.

E. A. Rowell presided. Mrs. Mary Mallett, Multnomah County W. C. T. U. president, read the Scripture passage. The speakers were Rev. Frank Lafayette Loveland, pastor of the First Methodist Church; Mrs. Alice Hanson, a member of the State Board; Mrs. Jennie Kemp, a National worker who is working in the Oregon dry campaign;

Miss Edna Rowland, National worker in the Young People's department, and Mrs. Swope, who read the message from Mrs. Henrietta Brown, acting state president.

Miss Rowland, an intimate friend of the late Mrs. Stevens, told of her prophetic vision, of her splendid womanliness and of her ability as a leader. Dr. Loveland, also a friend of Mrs. Stevens, told of her qualities and spoke of the success of the prohibition movement in Kansas. When he referred to that state and to Carrie Nation there were bursts of applause.

E. A. Rowell, in making a plea for a generous contribution from the audience to help carry on the work, said: "The liquor interests are outfighting us. They are sending out women wearing white ribbons and asserting to be W. C. T. U. women who are in reality getting signatures to petitions favoring rum. People unsuspectingly sign, thinking they are helping the temperance cause."

SCHOOLS ARE PRAISED

PROGRESS IN PORTLAND WINS PLAUDITS FROM EDUCATORS.

Survey Made Locally Declared to Have Become Textbook Throughout Country at Large.

That the Portland schools have made more progress than the schools in any other town in the West during the last year was asserted Saturday by J. H. Francis, superintendent of the Los Angeles schools, in his address before the Puget Sound Teachers' Association at Seattle.

Mr. Francis passed through Portland last night on his way home from attending the teachers' convention in Spokane.

Among the Portland educators who attended the convention were O. M. Plummer, School Superintendent Alderman and School Architect Naramore. The Portland representatives expressed great satisfaction with the prominence which the Portland school survey enjoys among the educators of the United States. In many districts the survey is now used as a textbook, according to Mr. Plummer.

Another item in which the Portland delegates expressed interest was the agricultural improvement work now progressing under the direction of the Holden committee and C. L. Smith, of the O.-W. R. N. Railroad.

Corn to seed 4000 acres, they say, has been selected from various sections of the Northwest, tested by the Spokane High School students, to determine its germinating power, and is now being redistributed in the districts where it was grown.

Bumper Strawberry Crop Expected.

SALEM, Or., April 19.—(Special.)—The indications are that Marion County will have one of its largest strawberry crops this year, according to farmers living near this city. The earlier varieties, such as the Golden Dollar, the Oregon and the Wilson, are in bloom. The farmers say the only thing that could prevent a large crop would be a heavy frost, but its possibility is not great. Rains have not injured the blossoms.
