

NEW JURY WILL TRY ESCHEAT CASE

Second Set of Claimants Will Wage Legal Battle for Winters' Estate Today.

11 LAWYERS' FIRMS BUSY

Total of 102 Persons Allege They Are Heirs of Deceased Recluse Through Several "Fathers." Contestants in Groups.

The second round of the Winters escheat case, brought by the State of Oregon against claimants as heirs to the estate of Henry D. Winters, Portland recluse who died in June, 1911, was begun before Circuit Judge Morrow yesterday. When there were no available jurors for examination late yesterday Judge Morrow adjourned court until this morning when the impaneling of the jury will be continued.

When the trial was commenced two weeks ago yesterday it was agreed that the same jury should try the entire case, but evidence which the court held might have been prejudicial against the other heirs was brought out at the hearing of the Purdy claim, which was denied last week. On motion by Judge Lionel Webster, appearing for one set of claimants, Judge Morrow discharged the first jury and ordered another one selected to try the claims of the other litigants.

As the case will be presented to the jury, the 102 claimants probably will divide themselves into five or possibly six groups, each claiming relationship with Henry D. Winters, whose property is in dispute through as many different families.

Fifty-six Claim Same Man.
The greatest number of claimants, 56, charged that they are the heirs of Henry D. Winters through William Winters, whose home was in New York. These 56 claimants live now in Iowa, Kansas, Indiana and Oklahoma and are represented at the trial by attorneys Hall & Lepper, Ganoes & Ohmart, Samuel Griffen of Kansas City, and Clark & Clark.

Twenty-one claimants, whose homes are in New York, claim the property through Elifaha Winters, whose home they say, was in New York. They are represented at the trial by Attorneys Angell & Fisher.

Eleven claimants, who are represented by Attorneys Manning, White & Hitch, Barge Leonard and George Gearhart, claim that Henry D. Winters was born in 1823, his father being John Winters, whose home was in New York. Attorneys U'Ren & Scherer, of Oregon City, represent litigants who claim that Henry D. Winters' father was Henry D. Winters, Sr., who had two brothers, John and Michael, both of whom lived in New York state.

Jury to Be Completed Today.
Attorneys Emmons & Webster, of Portland, and Langan & Mendenhall, of Oakland, represent seven litigants in Minnesota, Michigan, Iowa and California who claim the property through Lewis Cline Winters, of New York State.

According to Attorneys Moser & McCue, who represent four claimants, Henry D. Winters' father was named Claus Winters. These claimants charge that his home was in Germany.

In all 11 firms of attorneys represent claimants to the property, all of whom are opposed by District Attorney Evans and Attorneys John F. Logan and Ralph Citron, counsel for the state.

When the jury is completed today, Judge Morrow will take up first the claims of those litigants represented by Attorneys Manning, White & Hitch, Barge Leonard and George Gearhart.

YOUNG WIFE FILES CHARGE

Husband of 70 Accused of Trying to Poison Mate, 25.

May and December met in Municipal Court yesterday, when Mrs. John G. Minns, 25 years old, faced her 70-year-old husband and accused him of intending to poison her with arsenic and blow her up with dynamite. They have been separated, and Minns said his whole object in going to 1481 East Nineteenth street, where she is staying, is that he wished to see their child. Mrs. Minns said her husband stole the family Bible, which was given her by her Bible class in Australia. He denied it. They were married in St. Helens. Judge Stevenson ordered Minns to keep away from his wife and not annoy her.
