

TWO SOLDIERS DIE WHEN BOAT SINKS

Three Others of Crew Lifting Mines Near Fort Stevens Have Narrow Escape.

LAUNCH LEAKY AT START

Craft Goes Down When Loaded With Equipment—Company Commander Tries to Jump Into Water in Effort to Save Men.

FORT STEVENS, Or., April 30.—(Special.)—Corporal Klompke and Private Price, of the Thirty-fourth Company, Coast Artillery Corps, were drowned this afternoon when a launch being used to pick up mines foundered. Musciana Hoenig, Private Smith and Private Decker, of the same company, were rescued.

The five men were ordered by Lieutenant Couley, commanding the mine planter, to do the work. Launch No. 3, assigned to them, was leaking when they started and the weather was unfavorable, it is said. When the distribution box and heavy cable were loaded into the launch it began to settle rapidly.

Efforts to Bail Fall. The men tried to bail it out, but in the rough weather they could make no headway. As the craft became dangerously full of water Corporal Klompke called out: "We are swamping."

A moment later the launch sank. Corporal Klompke and Private Price were unable to keep afloat. Private Smith and Musciana Hoenig tried to help them. Soldiers on the mine planter hacked a lifeboat into the water with their knives in a mad endeavor to get to the struggling men. Lieutenant Townes, their company commander, tried to jump in to help them, but was restrained by Sergeant Hartman.

Navy Arrives Too Late

Sergeant Simmons put out with a yawl and reached the scene of the accident before the soldiers in the lifeboat. But Musciana Hoenig and Private Smith, weakened by the cold water, were forced to relinquish their holds upon the drowning men. They were barely able to keep afloat themselves until pulled into the rescuing craft.

Private Price was 18 years old. Corporal Klompke recently was recommended for a commission by the volunteers in the event of a war with Mexico.

A similar accident was narrowly averted on a previous occasion when men were ordered to do some work on the bar in a small boat. A heavy sea was running and the men, including Lieutenant Townes, were unable to undertake the work.

MISS VAN WATERS IS HEAD

Fraser Detention Home Today Gets Expert in Social Work.

Miss Marian Van Waters will take active charge this morning as the new head of the Fraser Detention Home, succeeding Samuel D. White, who has resigned to do special work in the juvenile court. Miss Van Waters arrived from Boston Tuesday and yesterday had a long talk with Judge Gatons relative to her new work. The new superintendent, a daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George B. Van Waters, of East Twenty-eighth street, comes to Portland from Boston, where she has been connected with the social service work and the Children's Aid Society of the Boston Juvenile Court. She has been engaged in social research work in the East for three or four years, in addition to her study for a doctor of philosophy degree at Clark University. In concluding her work at Clark University, Miss Van Waters presented a thesis on "The Adolescent Girl."

Before going East to continue her study and begin her social work, Miss Van Waters attended the University of Oregon, graduating in 1908, and two years later receiving a degree of Master of Arts.

PROMINENT PORTLAND CITIZEN AND ATTORNEY WHO DIED YESTERDAY.

body during the trial of Andrew Johnson. On his return from Washington Mr. Mallory resumed the practice of law. In 1872 he was elected to represent Marion County in the General Assembly and was chosen Speaker of the House.

President Grant appointed him United States District Attorney and he was reappointed by President Hayes, continuing in office from 1874 to 1882. After this he had a Government appointment at Singapore, Asia, after which he took a trip around the world.

Returning to Oregon in 1882, Mr. Mallory began the practice of law as a member of the firm of Dolph, Bellinger, Mallory & Simon. When Mr. Bellinger was appointed United States District Judge by President Cleveland, he was succeeded by Judge Strahn, and the firm name became Dolph, Mallory, Simon & Strahn. After Judge Strahn's death Mr. Simon was elected to the United States Senate and the name of Gearin was then added to the firm.

Impression Left on Courts. Judge Mallory's connection with the legal profession has left an impression on the record of Oregon's courts. He has been connected with much of the important litigation tried in Portland and the state. For years he was counsel for several railroad corporations. He at one time was president of the Oregon State Bar Association, of which he was a charter member, and he was actively interested in the Columbia River and Northern Railroad project. He was a member of the City and Suburban Railroad Company and for the United States National Bank.

He built and owned the Hotel Mallory at Lowndale and Yamhill streets and owned the ground on which the Railway Exchange building was erected under a long lease. He was associated in practice with a brilliant coterie of legal talent. Before he became a member of the firm of Mitchell & Dolph both of these attorneys had served as members of the United States Senate. Mr. Simon and Mr. Gearin both served in the United States Senate.

Roseburg Laid Out by Him. While living in Roseburg Mr. Mallory was married to Miss Lucy Rose, a native of Michigan, a daughter of Aaron Rose, who came to Oregon in 1851. He laid out the town of Roseburg on a part of a tract of land of 220 acres upon which he settled.

Judge Mallory's career is one which reflects credit and honor upon the state. He was a man of quiet tastes and studious habits. His hobbies were carpentering and gardening. He took the greatest pleasure in turning some dainty piece of furniture on his lathe or tending the rose bushes and other flowers in his extensive garden. He did not belong to any secret order at the time of his death, or for many years before, but in the early days of the state was the first noble grand of the Oddfellows.

He was first taken to the Good Samaritan Hospital and thence to school by H. E. Wagoner, the driver of the automobile. No injuries were sustained.

The boy was riding on a streetcar. The automobile was following. The boy ran diagonally across the street after dismounting. Dr. A. E. Hockey made the examination at the hospital.

NIGHTGOWN PUT ON FIRE

Wife Says Husband Angry When She Did Not Give Cigarettes to Him.

ATLANTA, April 28.—(Special.)—Cigarettes and an automobile played an important role in divorce suits in the Fulton courts. Mrs. Clara Johnson, a beautiful, dark-haired woman, told the jury a remarkable story of her husband, Rev. S. Johnson.

She said that her husband one night asked for cigarettes and whiskey, and when she had none to give him, he struck a match and set fire to her nightgown, telling her he was going to burn her to death. She was given her verdict.

H. J. Allen, a Tennessee farmer, said he saw an ad in a paper by Mrs. Tommie Allen, answered it, and they were married. After some time she demanded that he buy her a handsome house and he refused. Then, he alleges, she deserted him. He was given his first verdict.
