

TRANSFER IS BEGUN

Produce Houses Start Moving to East Alder Street.

TRACKAGE IS ADVANTAGE

Pearson-Page and Pacific Fruit Companies Lead Vacating of Front Street, Commission Row More Than 25 Years.

The transfer of the produce and commission house district of this city from Front street, where it was established more than a quarter of a century ago, to the East Side, has at last begun.

The two-story concrete and brick building, erected by the Thompson estate on East Alder and extending from East First to East Second streets, has been completed and the two firms to occupy it have crossed the river.

The purpose of these firms in quitting Front street is to obtain the trackage facilities which are available on the East Side, and also to get away from the traffic congestion which is late years ago made the transaction of any kind of business on Front street a difficult matter.

Negotiations have been under way some time for the construction of other modern buildings in the same district, to be occupied by other commission firms.

FIRE THREATENS HOTEL

OLD PARIS HOUSE ENDANGERED, BUT TOTAL LOSS ONLY $1200.

Rooming-House and Restaurant Building Destroyed and Big Crowd Gathered to Watch Work.

Fire which started about 2:30 P. M. yesterday in the rear of a two-story wooden building occupied by a rooming-house and restaurant, at 46 Fourth street, North, threatened the Panama Hotel, a three-story building covering a quarter block.

Residents in the hotel conveyed much property to the street, but the building was never seriously threatened. A crowd of nearly 2000 persons were restrained by police squads in charge of Captain Moore and Sergeant Robson.

Musicians' Club Sings Praises of Father Dominic.

"CALL OF WEST" IS HAILED

"May His Melodies Continue to Describe for Us the Sunrise on His Mount Angel Hills," is Sentiment of Admirers.

The banquet tendered by the Musicians' Club, of this city, at the Hotel Portland yesterday to Father Dominic, the parish priest at Mount Angel, Or., and the well-known composer of music, was memorable not only from the fact that it was an expression of appreciation toward Father Dominic as a musician-composer, but as an instance where the guest of honor was too shy to make a speech of thanks in return.

Colonel Wood Starts Envoys.

Colonel Wood, in speaking on the topic of "Music, Literature and Art," said: "Art and beauty alone are eternal, and survive. The beauty that is part of what we call soul, and that is the immortal part of man, whether he be material or spiritual, who cares nowadays in digging up the buried ruins of that which was once the glory of Greece, say the ruins of old Syracuse, to bother only about remains of the Commercial Club of that city? In digging about the ashes of the past we search rather for the beautiful in poetry and art and for tablets that reveal truth, four million years ago, in the creation of the beautiful, and you are taking part in the permanent work of all time. I have known Father Dominic so many years that I could not say all that I should like to say in his presence. I could not utter one syllable of anything but praise of him. Such is his modesty that, if I were to tell him what I think of him, he would rather that I struck him a blow on the cheek."

Father Has Nature Soul.

"It is quite natural that our honored guest, Father Dominic, should love and understand the beauty and grandeur of Oregon scenery," said Frank Branch Riley. "He was born in a land opulent in Nature's masterpieces, the home of the flowered mountain valley and gleaming glacier, and the lover of Nature sings and thrills in all his compositions. He was a lad 13 years old, living at Roschack, his big grandfather, when his father, a Swiss editor and publisher, planned to make him a musician. The rest of the boys in this generous family of 15 children went in for newspaper life. In designing Dominic for a musician, his father didn't get so far away from journalism after all, for all the musicians I know are breaking into the newspapers, or trying to."

Musicians Called Nobodies.

"His father condescended to call him a priest, and it is recorded that this spiritual adviser remonstrated, saying: 'Ah! don't make him a musician—musicians sind luppen' (musicians are nobodies)."

"How times have changed! He could say nothing of the sort today, raising, as I do now over this impressive luncheon banquet."

"Make him a priest," said the adviser, "and then he can be a musician, too."

"Good advice. That is what was promptly done, and so we have Father Dominic, devoted pioneer of great university, builder of one of the finest churches in Oregon and creator of an inspirational overture that shall live in the hearts of the people of his adopted country, long as one stone shall stand upon another in the Cathedral of Mount Angel."

Mr. Riley referred to Father Dominic's achievements as a composer and concluded:

"Ever unassuming and retiring, we at last have Father Dominic today where we want him, and we are proud to pause this hour, in the midst of our mad game of money-getting, to gratefully tribute our appreciation. We are glad this rugged little Alpin pine, transplanted from the old Engleberg, has taken root and grown to such proportions in the Engleberg of our new world, and sends out wider and wider the spreading branches of his usefulness. May this good citizen, parish priest, this pastoral poet and master musician, live long in his beautiful retreat. May he continue to describe for us with his melodies the sunrise upon his beloved Mount Angel hill, and the wide valley in twilight, and the song of night birds in the glen where his sleeping parish lie. May we be uplifted always by his sympathy and humanity, as well as by his devotedness and tenderness. We shall always have new messages of love and light and life; and here to come, who have been fools enough to turn from God's out-of-doors into the crowded city life, come to us that we may assure him again, and yet again, of our gratitude and our love."

David H. Wilson gave a technical appreciation of Father Dominic's new work, "The Call of the West."

Father Dominic was asked to make a speech, but through the president, W. Gifford Nash, whispered that he hoped his overture, "The Call of the West," would speak for him.

"In my work with directories over the country I have noticed that the cities of the Pacific Coast have grown faster than any others in the United States and that Los Angeles, Portland and Seattle have shown the largest percentage of gain," said Mr. Polk last night. "A great change has taken place in Portland since I was here eight months ago. The many large buildings that have sprung up and are now springing up surprise me. Portland is forging ahead handsomely."
