NEW TENNIS COSTUME IS UNIQUE AND CHARMING.

Something brand new and decidedly unique is depicted in the new sweater and cap to be worn for tennis playing. Miss Lambert is attractive in this costume, that was designed by Philippe, of Paris.

Complimenting Miss Claire Houghton, Mrs. John K. Kollock presided at an attractive luncheon yesterday. The guests were presented with paper caps with white ribbons, and the hostess found their places at the prettily decked tables by matching the ribbons tied to the corsage bouquets at the seats.

In addition to the honors asked to share Mrs. Kollock's hospitality were Mrs. Conrad Dalbrueck, Mrs. Carl L. Wernicke, Mrs. C. H. Hindman, Mrs. Charles Henry Davis, Jr., Miss Hazel Dolph, Miss Grace Honeyman, Miss Isabella Gault, Miss Barbara and Miss Helen Houghton, Donald R. Munro, Miss Claire Wilcox and Miss Nan Wood Robertson.

At a small tea Wednesday afternoon, Miss Clara Fields announced her engagement to Mandel Lichtensten. Miss Fields' guests included only a few of her most intimate friends to whom the news came as a genuine surprise. She is the daughter of the late Edmund T. Fields and Mrs. Josephine Fields.

The former being associated with the Southern Pacific Railroad at Oregon City for 29 years. Miss Fields is a charming girl, with a vivacious and pleasant personality. She is connected with the Sibley, and the G. C. Fields, and is of an old pioneer family. Her father is the son of Mrs. R. Lichtensten, a brother of Mrs. S. Lipman, J. Shandling, and H. Lichtensten, and is a popular business and clubman. The wedding will be a home affair, taking place at the home of Mrs. Fields, in Laurelhurst, after which a large reception will be held.

A number of invited folk are interested in the wedding at San Francisco of Sanford P. Lowengart and Miss Amy Dinkelapell, of San Francisco, which was solemnized last night at the Hotel Fairmont. It was a most beautiful affair, and after the ceremony, which was performed by Dr. Martin Meyer, a wedding supper was served, during the evening. Morris Dunne left last night for San Francisco, where his wedding to Miss Evelyn O'Farrell will take place Tuesday.

Mrs. E. H. Habighorst, of Ladd's Addition, accompanied by her sister, Miss Le. Prehn, returned from a two-months' visit in Honolulu with her daughter, Mrs. Alph. Beryl Clancy.

The children of the Hawthorne school will give an entertainment and May festival tonight at 8 o'clock, in Washington High School auditorium. A splendid programme has been arranged as follows: Chorus by primary children, dumbbell drill, "The Court of Boyville," Prizes, Yachting, piano duet, Beatrice Hermanson and Eva Lange; "Barbara Fritchie," Hoige Williams; wand drill, recitation, Florence Graden; violin solo, Charles Hermanson; recitation, Charlotte Taylor; Maypole dance by 20 little girls. The committee, consisting of Mrs. G. L. Buland, Mrs. E. J. Hadley, Mrs. William Ingold, Mrs. M. J. Ballard, Mrs. W. H. Hallam, Mrs. Lewis Montgomery, Mrs. Hughes, Mrs. J. C. Hermanson, Miss E. E. Monroe, Miss H. B. Billings, Miss M. Shonkvieler, Miss C. Felt, Professor E. J. Hadley and Professor Krohn, are working hard to make it a success. A candy booth will be attended to by little girls.

The bird walks every Sunday are most interesting and enjoyable, forming a healthful entertainment for many young people. Strangers in the city are often among those taking the walks, and on the trips are enabled to see the beautiful country surrounding Portland. Anyone interested in birds is invited to join the outing. The party leaves the Association at 2:30 each Sunday. Picnic suppers are taken. Last Sunday 15 species of birds were identified.

The vesper service at 4:30 o'clock this Sunday will be an event of interest. An address and some music will be followed by a social hour. Any girl who is strange to the church will be made to feel at home if she attends.

An entertainment will be given tonight by the Hawthorne Parent-Teacher Association at Washington High School. A May-pole dance, music and special features will make the programme attractive. The teachers of the school will serve as a reception committee with Mrs. G. L. Buland, Mrs. E. J. Hadley, Mrs. William Ingold, Mrs.

Disposable pancakes (Mrs. C. V. S.)—Toast dried bread in a moderate oven until light brown all through. Pass through the food chopper, and sift. For one cup ground bread crumbs use two cups sour milk, one-half cup flour, one egg and one teaspoonful soda dissolved in one-quarter cup water. Bake in the usual way. These cakes are light and do not get soggy after standing.

To clean white kid gloves (Mrs. C. V. S.)—Wet white cornmeal with benzine and rub on the gloves while on the hands. Do not clean anything in this way near a fire lamp or gas flame.

Divorced Life

By Helen Hessong Fleussle.

She Meets a Lonely Artist.

WILL, enchanting dreams of New York glistened persistently through Marian's mind. Already, before the dawn of going to New York, her trunk. The money which had been telegraphed her would take her to the city of Cities, provide her with a few new clothes, and leave her a little to go on.

The thought of New York stirred her with a certain magnetic appeal. It drew forth from her subconsciousness her almost forgotten memories of vivid scenes of travel, social conquest, fine dinners, gallant cavaliers and luxuries. The money-need of the past months and the despatching of her plight since securing her divorce, had made solid thoughts command her attention almost entirely. But now the extravagant dreams and visions of earlier days were brought trooping back by the thought of New York.

Her day was loaded down with packing, with preparations for the journey. In the afternoon she boarded a streetcar. Her heart bounded. Without a single misgiving she took a last look at the familiar streets and houses which she had so long called home. Downtown, the roar of traffic gave her a hint of the big, sonorous chant of the many-voiced city toward which the train would soon be bearing her. Ahead she saw life, excitement, change, romance.

Out through the tangle of switches and through the maze of streets, and on through the city's grimy outskirts. The quiet hum of the steel Pullman directed and stimulated her spirits. She had never felt more free, more completely through with the domestic strife into which marriage had plunged her. The thought was frankly welcoming between her and all that was past. Life and freedom, like a gleaming, bounding sea, beckoned with open arms.

Later, when Marian started for the diner, she was conscious that more than one of the passengers lifted their eyes to her as she passed. She recalled how she had met the Van Dines on the train at the time of her first divorce. She wondered what would befall her now. She was eager for a chat with a stranger. A year ago the mere thought would have shocked her.

The diner was crowded. Rather than wait she allowed herself to be shown to a seat opposite an interesting-looking man, perhaps 36. She found herself looking at his careless, rippling hair, his dark eyes, his rugged nose and sensitive mouth. Several times his heavy-lidded eyes met hers and she was flattered.

"Will you forgive me if I talk to you?" he said. "I think you are a very beautiful girl."

"Why should you want to?" she asked naively.

"Because I am unmercifully lonely," he answered, with a sad, haunting shrug of his shoulders. "I am neither a masher bent on telling you that I have fallen in love with you at first sight, nor a smooth-tongued man who would sell you jewels to sell. I'm just lonely for a few pleasant words with someone, preferably with a beautiful lady."

Her candid ease the man talked engagingly about himself. He was an artist, he said, had returned but recently from France. He was a Trojan at his easel for a public, alas, which preferred chromos to approximations of real art. He berated the province of American cities and towns about Vienna, glorified Rome and Venice and Paris. He sent Marian's thoughts flying overseas, made her see the world through her horizon with his flow of words.

"I belong over there," he said. "Things are so different here, except the fact that the weather is just as bad. America is cold. It does not understand. But America is young yet," he smiled indulgently.

Marian, enchanted, an artist! Her heart went out to him in his loneliness.

Y. W. C. A. Notes

The First Aid lectures given every Tuesday evening in the auditorium are proving immensely popular, and next Tuesday Dr. J. Earle Elise will speak on "Accidents by Fire, Water, Electricity or Poisonous Gases." Men and women will be welcomed on this occasion. Hereafter the lectures have been for women and girls only. At the close of Dr. Elise's talk, the pulpit will be demonstrated by a representative of the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company. The meeting will begin at 7:45 o'clock.

Last Tuesday Dr. Mary L. Evans talked on "Consciousness." A large number of women attended the lecture, and all took notes. The note-book and pencil are useful at these excellent addresses.

A swimming and diving exhibition, to which women are invited, will be held tonight. A series of tests will be given. When the girls of the swimming classes can swim well 250 yards, using breast, back and side strokes, and can dive straight front and straight back dives, they are permitted to wear the efficiency pins.

The Association has a canoe, with the use of which life-saving is taught. Tests were given the Juniors last week. An average of 51 girls have been taught to swim at the Association within the past few months. The average number of lessons required to master the art has been but two.

ABOUT MOLES.

HAVE had several letters about moles and a treatment for them. I cannot give one general treatment for moles, for the reason that moles differ so greatly in kind and size. Sometimes they are so slight that they are satirically called "beauty spots"; these are sometimes raised above the skin and sometimes are level with it. They are sometimes merely discolorations and sometimes covered with a hairy growth. The coloring matter is deep under the skin so that a scar remains if they are removed either by knife or a hot iron.

These facial blemishes and other discolorations may be treated according to their specific character. Electricity, if skillfully applied, is the safest and most effectual remedy, when they are of a serious or chronic nature.

A fleshy mole which stands out prominently on face or neck, can be removed by tying it closely, as near the root as possible, with a silk thread or a hair. This ligature stops the supply of nutriment, and in a few days the mole will shrivel, turn black and drop off, leaving almost no scar. It should not be pricked or irritated.

When discolorations are of a trivial or superficial character, use of long standing, the daily use of the following freckle specific will bleach and sometimes entirely remove them.

Freckle Specific.

Distilled Water—Six ounces.
Glycerine—Two ounces.
Dextrine—One-half ounce.
Oxide of zinc—150 grains.
Pour this solution over red raspberries or a mixture of raspberries and currants, equal parts of each fruit or two parts berries to one part currants as preferred. Have the solution "just to cover" the fruit. Then crush the fruit a little, with a wooden potato masher, and let stand over night. If the water is very warm, or for two or three days if cool. Drain as for jelly. Measure the juice and bring just to boiling point. Add from one-half to one cup sugar for every cup juice. The exact amount must depend upon the acidity of the fruit-juice and upon personal taste. As soon as the sugar is completely dissolved, seal the juice in sterilized cans or bottles.

For use, dilute to taste with aerated or cold water or use with hot water as a "warming drink" in winter.

Other fruits and berries may be similarly treated. Large fruits, as peaches, prunes or apricots, must be cut up before soaking in the acid solution. Ordinary vinegar may take the place of acid, but the "fruit flavor" is not so pronounced.

Second, Don't you think if he really cared for me that he would come in spite of his sister and brother?

A young man to whom I was introduced lately asked to take me out in his car and I went with him and he asked to see me again and I granted him permission.

Third, Do you think it wrong for me to go with him, as he seems to like me very well?

Fourth, Had I better drop the other boy who has acted as though he did not care for me?

Waiting patiently for your much-needed advice.

MISS B.

First, No. If he is engaged to you he should certainly call upon you or break his engagement.

Second, If he really cared for you, his mother and brother would not be able to influence him against you.

Third, No. If your fiancée does not call upon you, you may accept attentions from others.

Fourth, You should come to a thorough understanding with your fiancée. Either he engaged to him or not. It is for you to decide.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK GOOD

Bankers See Heavy Crops Ahead and Better Prices.

Business conditions in the Northwest and on the Pacific Coast are not changed materially since April 1, says the current news letter of the Merchants National Bank.

"Grain crop prospects are very rosy," it continues. "With showers in May and June and no hot winds, we ought to have bumper crops."

"Fruit conditions are not quite as favorable as last month. Prunes and peaches have suffered severely from the cold weather, rains and frost. Except for these items the fruit situation is good."

"Woolgrowers in general are firm in their belief that their product will maintain high prices and the present condition of the market is bringing a great deal of money into the Northwest."

"The lumber trade is not active, but the tone has improved and prices have firmed up. Buying is largely in small lots and for immediate shipment."

The salmon season promises well. The 1914 run, it is anticipated, will be smaller than that of 1913.

Bank clearings for the country at large are increasing, says the report. Prices of staple commodities are decreasing but business throughout the Nation is in a halting mood. Money is easier because the demand for manufacturing and merchandising is weak.

Special attention will be given to the instruction of the boys and girls of the city. "Flags will be everywhere in evidence. SALLEM, Or., April 30.—I thank you for the many helpful suggestions and recipes I get in "The Oregonian." One you published a year ago, for currant and raspberry jam, I found delicious, but I have lost the recipe. As several have asked me, I am asking too much to ask you to repeat it? Have you ever published the recipe for easily directed hot cakes with an acid closing? I have had good success with my plan for cleaning white kid gloves and wish to give it to others. I should like a cream salad dressing recipe.
