ABOUT 100 attractively gowned matrons and maids called yesterday afternoon at the John F. Logan residence in Irvington to greet Mrs. Adna Sharpsten, of New York. The rooms were thronged and the gala attire of the guests combined with the handsome floral decoration of the house made the scene one to be remembered. Mrs. Logan and her honor guests were charming in their Spring frocks. Mrs. Logan chose a simple white net gown, trimmed with a mere suggestion of the new French blue taffeta. Mrs. Sharpsten wore a smart black charmeuse gown, embellished with filmy lace. A delightful and refreshing feature of the event was the singing of Mrs. Delphine Marx. She was accompanied by Mrs. Rose Bloch-Bauer.

The tentable was particularly attractive and artistic, the center was adorned with a huge bowl filled with shaded snapdragon and blue lupin, tied with little bows, and placed at intervals about the table were handsome blue and gold candlestick, linked together with garlands of the blossoms. Small French baskets of the same toned flowers also were used effectively on the table, and placed about the rooms.

Freeding at this prettily appointed table were Mrs. W. A. Bunn, Mrs. Dan J. Malarky, Mrs. Warren E. Thomas and Mrs. Edgar B. Piper. They were assisted by Mrs. John Claire Monteith, Miss Emjean Gill and Mrs. James Wilson.

Mrs. Bushong's gown was a handsome combination of pink and gold chiffon, with a blue lace.

Mrs. Thomas was attired in a charming frock of white crepe meteor and lace. Mrs. Piper wore a black and white charmeuse gown, built on simple and chic lines. Mrs. Malarky's gown was a rich plum-colored charmeuse, and was adorned with rare old lace.

Little Dorothy, Jean and John Logan, children of the hostess, received the guests at the door, and Miss Dorothy was charming in a dainty pink frock with chic pink bows, and little John in his smart white suit built on Kate Greenaway lines was attractive.

Among those who will take a prominent part in the elaborate entertainment are, Mrs. Guy M. Standifer, Helen Harmon and Edith of Portland, Or. An elaborate outdoor programme has been arranged which includes spectacular drills, dances and displays. AT THE annual meeting of the Portland Woman's Exchange held yesterday afternoon in the tearoom on Fifth street, Miss Henrietta E. Falling was re-elected president. Mrs. William C. Alvord, who has been acting president for eight months during Miss Falling's absence in Europe, presided. The other officers selected were: First vice-president, Mrs. Leon Hirsch; second vice-president, Mrs. Alvord; secretary, Mrs. Frank E. Hart; assistant secretary, Mrs. Elizabeth Hamilton; treasurer, Mrs. A. F. Biles; assisting treasurer, Mrs. E. L. Thompson. New directors, Mrs. Alma D. Katz, Mrs. W. O. Van Schuyver, Mrs. Walter J. Burns, Mrs. Max Fishcher, Mrs. Martin Winch.

In her report, Mrs. William C. Alvord said:

"It is a difficult matter to carry on a business that is not a money-making affair. It must be borne in mind that the exchange is a philanthropy sustained by its subscribers and that its sole aim is to help women to help themselves. We charge but a small commission on the goods we sell and even with our subscription list of members we are unable to pay running expenses. So it is to the luncheon and tea that we look for revenues. During the year, at the request of patrons we decided to serve 50-cent dinners, but after a trial of three months we discontinued them, as the returns did not justify us in continuing them.

"The publication of our Exchange cook book has been a success and assistance and we still have several of the books on hand.

"Our business for the year has resulted in a total in sales to the amount of $16,469.55 having been made for our consignors, being only $21.95 less than the sales of last year.

"We have paid to two of our cake consignors $1565.15 and $1841.57 respectively, to a maker of bread and rolls, $122.57.

"We wish to go forward, and it is only through the help and co-operation of all that this can be done."

Mrs. Alvord paid tribute to Miss Thomson, manager of the exchange, to the employees and all who had taken part in the year's work. She praised the members to feel that the exchange is in the standard of the work completed, comparing it favorably with the best in the larger cities.

A letter report was read from Miss Falling, the president, who is in Rome. She said, in referring to the cook book: "Even in foreign lands, I hear words of praise for its recipes."

Mrs. Charles Scadding gave one of the most interesting reports—that of the household committee. She spoke of her co-workers as "efficient, faithful and of good judgment," and told some of the little amusing incidents that proved the committee had many strenuous tasks to perform and had done them well.

Mrs. O. Van Schuyver reported on the high class of needle work done by the consignors and of the many women who had been helped by being able to dispose of their handiwork.

Letters from consignors were eloquent with encouragement for the members to feel that the exchange is worth while. One woman spoke of the institution as "a godsend"; another said it had been her sole support for years; another, a widow, had been able to send her children through high school with the money earned.

As the exchange has a department in the "Made-in-Oregon" exhibit at Meier & Frank Company's store, committees were appointed to have charge of the sales of the cook book for the benefit of the exchange during the week. Those appointed are: For this morning, Mrs. Leon Hirsch; this afternoon, Mrs. Sigmund Frank; for Wednesday morning, Mrs. Adrian McCallman; afternoon, Mrs. Henry Hausman; Thursday, Mrs. W. J. Burns and Mrs. Martin Winch; Friday, Mrs. A. F.

Divorced Life

THE Longacre building is a hive of theatrical offices. Marian stopped at the door of Luring & Co., the musical comedy producers, entered and asked for the manager.

"What you want to see him about?" demanded a squint-eyed youth at the closed gate.

"About work," answered Marian.

"Aw, you want to see the bookin' agent. You'll have to wait your turn. There's a dozen hams waitin' to see him now."

Marian dropped into a chair, and began studying the waiting men and women. One was a pale, weary, shabby, washed-out shadow of a girl, who had climbed stairs to booking offices until her boots were all but wrecks. Another, tall blonde, with flaming cheeks and pale gray hair, kept darting glances impatient with impatience, at the locked gate. A fat, pensive, slovenly brunette was a third rival for an engagement. The waiting men, some from flashy, hand-me-down-apparled youths to wasted old-young men, whose thespian careers seemed to have left them anything but satisfactory returns.

"Well," said the booking agent more than an hour later, when Marian had at last been admitted, "what's your line?"

Marian answered the crisp inquiry with a truthful statement of her experiences. The other regarded her with pleasant, honest, sympathetic eyes. His genuine dignity and quiet manner were utterly unlike the breezy Ratgenhauser.

"My advice to you is to stay out of the new 'Kings' until you can get as far from the stage as you can. If you've got a home, stick to it. If you haven't got a home, get one. You look like to find a girl to go into musical comedy. The chances to make a hit in this game are about one in ten thousand. The chances of a good girl getting spoiled in this life are overwhelming. I'm talking to you in this way because you're different from the usual run of women who come looking for work. It's not fair to talk like this to most of them. It wouldn't do any good. My honest advice to you is to get over the notion of going on with theatrical work before it's too late for you. I appreciate your interest in me," said Marian, "but I've made up my mind. I have to do something. Can you put me on?"

"If you could make any sort of a stab at singing," answered the agent, "I think I could use you in the chorus. It's easy enough to get singers, but not animal ones. TALKS ON DOMESTIC SCIENCE
By LILLIAN TINGLE.

BY LILLIAN TINGLE

GERVAIS, Or.—I have read and tried many of your recipes in the Oregonian and wondered if you couldn't help me in preparing a basket for a basket social. If you could suggest a design or two and what you think would be the most suitable to put in it, I would be much obliged. I don't care for fancy baskets, just something clever and catchy. And could you please write me before next Friday? I am sorry to disappoint you, but it is impossible for me to send answers by mail; and it is almost impossible to give you really useful advice about your basket without knowing anything of your resources, taste and skill.

A home-made willow basket would be quite as attractive if you know anything of basket-weaving; or a flower basket made with the aid of tissue paper. Poppy, rose, lily of the valley, pansy and poinsettia baskets are all fairly easy to make.

For filling, you will be the best judge as to quantity and kind of food, as you know best the appetite and taste of the probable eaters.

In putting up any lunch it is really wise to include something falling under each of the following headings: (1) "Something savory," such as daintily prepared "assorted" sandwiches. Nut breads are good for "half savory" sandwiches. Hollow rolls are also good. (2) "Something sweet," probably some kind of cake, fruit cake, loaf cake, cup cakes, rich fancy cookies, little loaf cakes, or shortbread would
