

ORPHEUS GRIPS

Robert T. Haines Leads Well-Balanced Comedy Cast.

BESSIE WYNN WORTH PRICE

Bob Matthews, the Clever "Dope Fiend," Takes Sympathetic Observers Through Lazy Dreamland by Poppy Route.

From the minute that Oterita, the Spanish dancer, flashing with iridescent beads and jeweled dashes on to the Orpheum stage in an opening act, the bill is full of brilliance and buoyancy. It is a hydra-headed attraction, with Bessie Wynn as one headliner and Robert T. Haines as another.

Haines Leads the Action. Mr. Haines, always a distinguished actor and one of reputation on the Pacific Coast, where we see him all too seldom, has a sketch called "The Man in the Dark" in his act which shows Mr. Haines' master direction in its unfolding despite the name of the author, William T. Hurlbut, at the top of the little cast.

Mr. Haines has one of his famous character roles. As a burglar in evening dress he overhears the proposed elopement plans between Agnes Gordon and her husband's friend, Jack Duane. With a sense of humor and a keen relish for ticklish situations, found only in the stage burglar, the night prowler of the footlights, between husband and wife by "showing up" Jack Duane in his true colors, Agnes learns that he is a "swicher" and thanks the kindly-disposed burglar for his interference. The roles are all handled cleverly in delightful, his very silences are eloquent and the role is distinctly a novel one.

Charles Wynate, one-time member of the Baker stock, plays the role of Jack Duane and Ethel Van Eytine, a smartly-attired woman, plays the wife with exactly the right depth of emotion without spilling over.

Bessie Wynn Is Show in Herself. A blue-eyed girl, who acts so optically and carefully, is Bessie Wynn, who wins easily. She wears stunning raiment and literally throws bushels of personality, smothered in radiant smiles across the footlights. She has that charming zest that comes with putting new melody twists to old airs. Her "cuckoo" song, from "Liza Lehmann, and her "Grow Little Mushroom, Grow," demonstrates the high artistic quality of Miss Wynn's offerings. Into a medley, garnished with quaint smiles and dance steps, she weaves National airs and topped her contribution with a pertinent ditty about "chickens." Miss Wynn is completely worth while going to see and hear.

Bob Matthews, Dope Fiend, Is Back. Back once more are Bob Matthews and Al Haines in their comical visit to "Dreamland," by way of the poppy route. Mr. Matthews sings the memorable song about "China" and Al Haines, who takes it up, to play plaintively through the subsequent enactment.

He has his old, delightfully true-to-life role of Dope Fiend in the act, and Al Haines, a "born" comedian, has the role of the chap who wants to buy the cigarette that furnishes the dream. The dream takes place in the interior of an extinct volcano, where two pretty mummies come to life and dance gracefully. The keynote struck in the whole act is comedy of an engaging sort.

Two Dancers Are Card. Wheeler and Wilson, that's their names, ride in on a sewing machine, sing a ballad of mine about the "machine-made names," and then set to dance. Nifty, right-up-to-the-minute dancing it is, too, with new steps never registered here before.

Lee Barth is a dialectician who doesn't bar any dialect from his story-telling. Dandy new stories they are and the tongue twisters are told in faithful editions of the real.

The Aerial Loyds have a great casting act, with one darling, nimble chap turning triple somersaults in the air. He should be named in the Loyds' billing, for he does the amazing, death-defying whirrs.

Oterita is genuinely Spanish and wears the picturesque, full-length, swirling skirts and little hat of the native dancer. She is ably assisted by Mattias Turron.

Mexican War Pictures Inspire Empress Audiences

"Salvation Sue" Runs Gamut of Human Emotions—Other Features Thrill.

The Empress has a strong, well-balanced bill this week. Occupying headline place are the Mexican war pictures that are intensely realistic. There are depicted all the notables, the generals and those who are making history in Mexico, the battlefields, the trenches, the firing line, skirmishers, rebels and federals. The pitiful condition of the refugees as they are seen crossing the Rio Grande, the prisons, the plight of the wounded, all these make realistic that was felt in what the Civil War General said. After all the strenuous scenes, the raging of battles and their consequences, are shown, there appears on the screen the United States fleet leaving Hampton Roads. The majestic dignity of these splendid vessels, with "Old Glory" floating in the breeze, stirs the patriotism of the audiences and storms of applause follow.

If headline space could be spared clear across the page, every act could be deservedly mentioned; they are all so good. Next to the pictures come the Fuchsians, seven clever gymnasts, who bring with them high honors won in Europe. There is a line of comedy introduced by these performers that is an additional treat. Their stunts are sensational and unique. They whirl through the air, turning double somersaults the while, and land easily on each other's shoulders as easily as if they were doing the most commonplace act.

Whittier's Barfoot Boy comes in attired in overalls, jumps and battered straw hat. With his "merry whistled tunes" he is one of the big hits of the show. Every bird of the forest that has a sweet song is imitated perfectly by the "boy" and for good measure he throws in some barnyard noises that would be hard to tell from the originals.

Frank and Pauline Berry have a laughable musical melange and as a finale to their act, in tiddies one little Berry, who is also a singer. Frank and Pauline can play all sorts of instruments and are immensely entertaining. William Morrissey and Dolly Hackett are billed as extra attractions and smart songologists and they live right up to their reputations.

OREGON POLITICAL GOSSIP

Only Four Days to Primary, Each Crowded With Speeches, Candidates and Ballies—C. A. Johns to Address Royal Arcanum at Luncheon, Mr. Brownell Explains Stand—Illegal Election Tickets to Be Investigated Further—News of the Candidates.

Judge A. S. Bennett, Democratic candidate for Governor, has returned from a week's campaign trip by automobile through the Willamette Valley, in which he went as far south as Benton county. He will wind up his campaign in Multnomah county with an address at a meeting in the Central Library Tuesday night. Colonel C. E. S. Wood will preside at the meeting and will introduce Judge Bennett. A score or more of prominent Democrats have accepted invitations to sit on the platform.

"On April 22 I received the same kind of a letter that ex-Governor Geer received from the state executive committee of the Prohibition party, signed by State Chairman J. P. Newell, in reference to my attitude toward accepting the Prohibition nomination for Governor if it were tendered to me," said George C. Brownell, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor at the Prohibition platform, yesterday. "I felt that the letter was written to me as an individual, and did not feel that it was good taste or exactly proper for me to express my attitude to the public, and answered it in that way. In my answer, in substance, I thanked him for writing the letter, and stated that I should have felt honored if I could have received the endorsement of the Prohibition party, but that I could not accept the nomination, and that I would accept the nomination if I were offered me; but my reason was, in substance, that I believed then and believe now, that when the Prohibition party put up a ticket, they are playing indirectly, although unintentionally, into the hands of the liquor interests of this state, and that the effect of putting up a ticket would be to arouse and embitter temperance Republicans, temperance Democrats and temperance Socialists who might otherwise have supported the amendment in the November election. I felt that the tendency would be to endanger the cause of the amendment, and I want you to understand that I was more interested in having an amendment to the constitution adopted by the people in this state than I was to be Governor, and that this has been my position all along."

Brownell discussed his prohibition platform at a meeting in the Gipsy Smith auditorium yesterday afternoon. William Hanley, Progressive candidate for United States Senator, returned yesterday from Eugene. Prior to visiting Eugene he was at Roseburg for two days and attended the annual inspection of the Oregon Agricultural College cadets at Corvallis. Mr. Hanley plans to pass a couple of days in Portland, and then will make a trip to Salem and Albany before the primary election.

One candidate who is running solely on his record, without making any campaign, is Frank J. Miller, chairman of the State Railroad Commission, who is an aspirant for the Republican nomination and re-election. Mr. Miller is kept so busy attending to his duties as a member of the Commission, which has been holding on an average 20 formal hearings a month, to say nothing of informal hearings and other demands on its time, that he couldn't do much campaigning if he wanted to. He is now completing his first term as a member of the Commission.

L. R. Stockman, of Baker, candidate for the Republican nomination for State Engineer against John H. Lewis, incumbent, is making a vigorous campaign. Mr. Stockman is an engineer of much practical experience. He has been connected with many large projects, and is a specialist in irrigation engineering.

At the regular weekly luncheon of Progressives at the Hotel Portland on Thursday, C. E. S. Wood will be the principal speaker. He will discuss "Some Phases of the Economic Situation," with special reference to the candidacy of William Hanley for United States Senator. Mrs. Mabel W. Plowman will preside.

What action will be taken against P. S. Malcolm, against whom a formal complaint was made out Saturday night charging him, and the printing firm of Bailey & Torrey, with "illegal election practices" in causing to be printed for circulation an "A. P. A." ticket, has not been determined by District Attorney Evans. Under this law, Mr. Evans is required to prosecute on his own initiative violations of the corrupt practices act under penalty of forfeiting his own office if he doesn't.

The complaint against Mr. Malcolm was issued by Walter Gevra, special agent of the District Attorney's office, had by personal investigation ascertained that 4000 of the so-called "A. P. A." cards, naming a ticket of 26 candidates, had been published for distribution.

No arrests have yet been made either in Mr. Malcolm's case or that of J. M. Richards, John Doe Healey and the Marsh Printing Company, against whom a similar complaint was made in connection with the publication of folders bearing the ticket of the "Voters' Protective League." This ticket, with one or two exceptions, was the same as that on the cards prepared for Mr. Malcolm. Plans had been made, the District Attorney's office had reason to believe, to distribute them at the churches yesterday.

The candidates named on both these tickets were ignorant of their selection, Mr. Evans has found. The law declared to have been violated in the publication and distribution of these two tickets reads as follows: "It shall be unlawful to write, print or circulate through the mails or otherwise any letter, circular, bill, placard or poster relating to any candidate at any election, unless the same shall bear on its face the name and address of the author, and of any person writing, printing, publishing, circulating, posting or causing to be written, printed, circulated, posted or published any such letter, bill, placard, circular or poster as aforesaid, which fails to bear on its face the name and address of the author, and of the printer or publisher shall be guilty of an illegal practice, and in violation of this section shall be punished by fine of not less than $10 or more than $1000."

"Mr. U'Ren's nomination will greatly weaken the prohibition strength in the state and will only add to the difficulties in the way of carrying the statewide amendment in the Fall," said T. T. Geer, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor on a Prohibition platform, at Eugene last week. "There are many Republicans in Oregon who intend to vote for the amendment, but who under no circumstances will support anythingavoring of the many political vagaries for which Mr. U'Ren stands. These the Prohibition convention deliberately antagonized by taking an action that was wholly unwarranted. Personally, it will help my candidacy, since 'dry' Republicans can obtain a Governor who will be as 'dry' as Mr. Clark himself without sacrificing their party principles or party standing. No Republican will have any occasion for supporting Mr. U'Ren."

John Manning, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, completed his campaign outside Multnomah county with an address Saturday afternoon at a well-attended farmers' meeting at Woodburn. Mr. Manning says he is satisfied with his prospects. He predicts that not more than 5000 Democratic votes out of the registration of approximately 15,000
