Guests at Business Men's Luncheon Tell of What Their Metropolis Is Doing and What Americans Aren't.

What Glasgow has done for the River Clyde in making it a navigable stream was told by Thomas McMillan, senior magistrate of Scotland's metropolis, at the Progressive Business Men's lunchon at the Multnomah yesterday

"Seventy or Eighty years ago the Clyde was only a streamlet with stepping stones across it." said Mr. Mc-Millan. "Now the Glasgow is called Port Glasgow and the river is dredged into the heart of the city. You have one of the finest rivers in

You have one of the finest rivers in the world at Portland, and it can be developed as a great shipping mart."

The munic pality is laying aside about 1250,000 a year as a renewal, or reserve, fund, and by next year the system will stand as an unincumbered asset of Glasgow's
