Boy on Eve of Voyage. On the eve of her departure for Eng-ind, Mrs. Chara Rimmer is anxious to ascertain the whereabouts of her 18-year-old son, Alfred Rimmer, who has been absent from his home near Hood River since May 26, 1913. His mother's address is R. F. D. No. 3, Hood River. He left home ostensibly to go to work. After four or five days, his mother received a card from Wyett. Or, asking that his clothes be sent him. Two of the three letters sent urging him to come home and tell his folks good-by before leaving were returned as "not known at Wyett." The last news heard of him was June Hy when he was understood to be on his way to Portland to get his pay for work he had done for the O-W. R. & N. Company. His mother thinks he may be employed on a ranch somewhere in the Willamette Valley and would be grateful for any intelligence as to his present residence. The hore is often known as "Tod" or
