LAST night's brilliant concert for the benefit of the Salvation Army was the inspiration for many festivities. Besides the great outpouring of smart society attending the musical, in addition to the gorgeous array of modish gowns and the sparkle of costly gems that graced the auditorium of Lincoln High School, there were dozens of dinner parties preceding the main event of the evening and later on the grills and fashionable hotels were thronged with merry parties assembled for the after-concert supper.

In the audience were noted all of society's most fashionably-gowned maids and matrons. Never before has the school auditorium presented so gay a scene. The artists, the guests, everyone entered into the spirit of the evening. Mrs. Rose Bloch Bauer, who had arranged the programme, wore an exquisite Parisian gown, strikingly becoming.

In addition to the audience a charming innovation was noted in the presence of a bevy of young girls, attired in French frocks, who went among the guests selling candies and flowers during the intermission.

No event this year has approached in smartness and splendor the concert that made last night memorable, socially as well as musically.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Ide Fuller entertained Tuesday evening at dinner, complimenting their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Fuller, of Providence, R. I., at a prettily-appointed dinner at their attractive home on Portland Heights. The table decorations were greatly admired, a cloth of gold roses and ferns were combined with beautiful golden-shaded candles and a profusion of roses from the Fuller gardens adorned the center.

Seated around the table were Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Fuller, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin T. Griffith, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Dunlap, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Beech, Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Caldwell and Mr. and Mrs. James A. Curry.

On Monday Mrs. Fuller gave a jolly tea party to Estacada for luncheon in honor of Miss Agnes Trimble and Mrs. Clinton Fuller. The private car was prettily decorated with roses. The guests included Mrs. John E. Wheeler, Mrs. Allan B. Slauson, Mrs. Jay Smith, Mrs. W. D. Jellison, Mrs. James F. Ewing, Mrs. Arthur C. Spencer and Mrs. L. L. Fuller. Mr. and Mrs. Fuller departed yesterday for their home in the East by way of the Canadian Pacific and will stop at Banff and Lake Louise.

Mrs. Robert Berger will entertain this afternoon at luncheon and bridge at her home on Melrose drive, overlooking the Willamette River.

A smart affair of yesterday was the small bridge party presided over by Mrs. D. H. Rand at her home, 164 North Twenty-fourth street. The decorations were Scotch broom, pink and white roses, pink poppies and greens artistically arranged. Card honors fell to Mrs. H. W. Hester, Mrs. Gene Cline. The guests were Mrs. John H. Burgard, Mrs. A. C. Callan, Mrs. A. N. Wright, Mrs. Paul De Haas, Mrs. O. B. Balow, Mrs. Alfred M. Gies, Mrs. J. V. Watson, Mrs. Gene Cline, Mrs. A. E. Jackson, Mrs. Frank R. Johnson, Mrs. Charles King, Mrs. William J. Lyons, Mrs. John L. Hester, Mrs. M. C. Bafield, Mrs. L. Straw, Mrs. C. J. Smith, Mrs. Theodore Nicolai, Mrs. A. N. Shannon, Mrs. G. N. Versteg, Mrs. Arthur Chance, Mrs. B. Miller, Mrs. M. C. Bafield, Mrs. Delahunt, Mrs. Jenkins, Mrs. E. R. Anthony, Mrs. J. Tanner, Mrs. Thompson, who is house guest of Mrs. Gene Cline.

The hostess was assisted by Miss Louise Williams Watson and Miss Helen Netzel.

The Big Sisterhood held its regular monthly meeting yesterday at the People's Institute. Miss Valentine Pritchard presided.

Reports of the "little sisters" were read. In response to a plea made at the annual meeting in April, an offer of the use of a seaside cottage for May, June and September was received and accepted. This will enable several girls to get a summer vacation.

Another friend volunteered to do sewing for "little sisters."

Mrs. Forrest S. Fisher, 63 Montgomery drive, will give a tea on Saturday from 2 to 6 o'clock for the benefit of a young girl who is at present in the open-air hospital.

The funds derived will be devoted to paying for the continued care of the "little sister."

Mrs. S. S. Range will join Mr. Range in Erie, Penn., where he has bought a theater, after the marriage of her son, Philip Ray Henderson, which will be solemnized June 2.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert M. Denison entertained at an elaborate dinner party Monday, in honor of Mrs. R. D. Cannon, who will leave soon for her new home in San Jose, Cal. The table decorations were carried out in pink, with a large bowl of pink sweet peas and place cards to correspond.

Covers were laid for Mrs. R. D. Cannon, Miss Margaret Cannon, Miss Dorothy Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. William H. See, Mrs. Minerva A. Denison, Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Carpenter, Mrs. Mary Bishop and the host and hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Denison also entertained at a dinner party Tuesday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Ross, of Seattle.

Mrs. N. U. Carpenter has issued cards for a large bridge party, to be given next Wednesday.

Mrs. T. T. Prickett, assisted by Mrs. Dell Shaver, will give a tea at her residence, 260 Wheeler street, for the benefit of the Aid Society of the Hasalo Congregational Church, tomorrow from 2:30 till 4:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Frank Gilbert Owen will entertain the smart set with an informal tea this afternoon. She is planning to leave soon for a visit to Medford, where Mr. Owen has extensive interests.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Genty announce the engagement of their daughter, Edna, to Clifford Allison.

Mrs. John E. Wheeler, of Portland Heights, presided at a handsomely-appointed luncheon yesterday in honor of Miss Agnes Trimble. Covers were laid for 12. Next week Mrs. Linn will entertain at a large tea for her and Mrs. James F. Ewing, which will be hostess at a tea in her honor.

Here is a practical use for one of Portland's roses: Something altogether unique, delicious and rich in flavoring and color is a jelly made by Mrs. H. Caswell, which has discovered a method of combining the red petals of the Jacqueminot with sugar. Prepared carefully, the jelly is sure to be a success. It is made by dipping the petals in a hot and a delicate flavoring for an ice cream sundae or as a cake filling the jelly is particularly delicious and is used by many of those who enjoy the secret of its making has been divulged.

A Struggle With a Microbe.
VAGUE recollections of how fortunes had been made with simple little mail-order projects flitted through Marian's mind, and she agreed to go to work for Henry James, a man who had her hat and coat, and her employer began initiating her into the manner of wrapping bottles of liniment with printed circulars, next with an outer wrapper, then tying, addressing and stamping his patron's packages. She had the end of the afternoon she had developed skill at the task. It was monotonous labor, especially for a private secretary, but she thought she would give it a try for a few weeks until she could find a more desirable position.

As she worked Ignatz thumped the typewriter machine and prated about the wealth he expected to make with the venture.

"By Jinks," he said once, "it looks like you're going to be a big help to me. You're all right, little girl."

"Do you think I'll do?" she answered gloomily, half amused and half angered at his patronizing attitude.

"You bet. You're taking right hold. You can cut out work for today. Show me up at 9 in the morning and don't worry about your salary. I'll make that right."

"How much will it be?" pressed Marian, and she added the felt sickened by the thought that she had come to the point of actually working for a fellow like this.

"I'll give you ten dollars a week to start with. That's good money for a beginner," he added with a smirk.

"How does it listen to you?" Ignatz asked, and he looked at her with a salary of $2000 a year denoted "poor white trash" to Marian. Today, in the light of her harsh experiences, $12 a week was a fortune, and she accepted it at least for a temporary expedient.

"It will be all right," she acquiesced. She had learned to put on her hat and coat, her employer's attitude toward her and undertook to put his arm around her.

"What do you mean?" she demanded sharply, turning upon him.

"Ain't you goin' to kiss me good-night?" he said, coming closer.

"No," she said, laughing harshly. "You're taking entirely too much for granted."

"Just once," he pleaded.

"My dear little man," she retorted, wistfully, "your assurance is really something amazing. I've had men get into my bed voluntarily, and I've had men and undertook to put his arm around her."

Little Discussions OF Love and Marriage

BY BARBARA BOYD.

"The Joyful Victims of Matrimony."
"I heard a bishop say, 'I'm married today that is just in line with what I have been telling you,'" said the bachelor girl.

The bachelor maintained a noncommittal silence.

"He said," went on the bachelor girl, seeing the bachelor wouldn't comment upon the profound wisdom of her remarks since they coincided with a bishop's, "that the moment one weds, one becomes a candidate for sacrifice."

"Looked at the bachelor rather gleefully.

"There seems to be a lot of joyful victims," observed the bachelor. "Besides, sacrifice isn't such a lamentable thing, is it?"

"If the other fellow does it, it isn't," replied the bachelor girl, cynically. "But notice most of us are not in a grand way voluntarily, and we don't desire. That is why I like what the bishop said. He knew that was what the mind of the person who married and he warned them, or think it tiresome advice, and so plunge to their destruction, coming from a man of the bishop's standing, it will make the rash and unthinking pause."

"But as I said before," replied the bachelor calmly, "sacrifice is not a thing to be desired. The more love that goes and the more of love that comes, the better. And that is what sacrifice really is. Love comes and crowds us out. And though to the world, looking on, there may seem to be a sacrifice, to the party interested there is only joy. Do you suppose the husband who makes sacrifices, or called for his wife—I don't mean merely humoring whims, but doing things that really contribute to her happiness?"

"What do you suppose she does as sacrifice? I don't think such an idea ever entered his head. He is simply happy to be able to make her happy. And don't you suppose he is a finer man than if he simply considered and catered to his own wishes? Seems to me if there was nothing else to recommend marriage, this statement of the bishop's would be one of its big assets."

"I don't think it would be a drawing card for the mob," observed the bachelor, "if I had to sacrifice a lot of performance I don't think appeals to the majority."

"But when they see it isn't really sacrifice, but service," remonstrated the bachelor, "it seems to me the thoughtful and fine-souled would not sidestep it. The more of the little egotistical self that goes, the more will we grow into the fine stature of manhood, that is our inheritance. And when we see that this process of growing comes from a very happy and joyful manner of living, what more can we ask?"

"I am afraid one would have to be very fine-souled to see the whole of marriage that way," sighed the bachelor girl. "If I had to sacrifice a lot I am afraid that instead of being conscious of my development and being joyful over service, I would be very irritable and miserable at having to give up cherished ideas."

"I don't believe it," said the bachelor. "Every true woman is happy in loving and in ministering to those she loves."

Chicken Pot Pie
The Chef's Favorite
By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine.

Some folks think that only "colored mummies" can cook chicken, but a trial of this famous chicken pot pie disproves that assertion. Every member of the family will thoroughly enjoy it.

K C Chicken Pot Pie, Baked Dumplings
One fowl cut in joints; 1/4 cup flour; 1/2 teaspoonful salt; black pepper; 2 cups flour; 3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; 1/2 teaspoonful salt; 1/2 cup shortening; milk or cream.

Cover the fowl with boiling water and let simmer until tender, then remove to a baking dish. Mix the 1/4 cup flour, salt and black pepper with cold water to a smooth paste and use to thicken the broth. Remove the fat from the top of the broth if necessary before adding the thickening. Pour this gravy over the fowl, until it is nearly covered, and reserve the rest to serve apart. Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt, three times; into this work the shortening and use cream or milk to make a dough, less stiff than for biscuits. Put this by spoonfuls over the fowl in the dish, which it should rest upon and completely cover. Let bake about 35 minutes.

When young tender chickens are served, this presents a most satisfactory way of serving old fowl. Veal or lamb prepared in this manner is more appetizing than when served as a stew. Try this and the 89 other delicious recipes in the K C Cook's Book, a copy of which may be secured free by sending the colored certificate packed in the 25-cent can of K C Baking Powder to the JACOBS MEAT CO., CHICAGO.
