PHILADELPHIA, May 20.— Pitcher Byron Houck, of the Philadelphia Americans, was re-leased Tuesday to the Baltimore club, of the International League, but he announced he would not join that team; that if he could not pitch in the big leagues he would not pitch at all.

Houck is a Portland boy, and oubtless would be satisfied to lay with the Portland Coast jub, but it is hardly likely that ciub, but it is hardly likely that Walt McCredle would want him. Byron is credited with being the wlidest pitcher in the world, and Mac let Gene Krapp slip from between his fingers because Gene almost drove him to apoplexy. Houck broke in with Spokane from the University of Oregon in 1911, and was drafted that Full

SAN FRANCISCO, May 20 .- (Special.) -With HI West pitching irreproach-ably save in the first inning, and his trouble in that was largely due to a case of bungling by Buddy Ryan, the Beavers put over their second straight win on the Oaks today.

Jack -Killilay was not so fortunate and following the course he has mapped for himself during the season thus far, proceeded to lose the fifth out of six games in which he has been the first out of six games in which he ha

Weather conditions were far better and the crowd that was present really enjoyed the happenings of the after-enjoyed the happenings of the afternoon.

Oakland confined its scoring to the first inning. Quinian led off with a nice drive to centerfield, but was forced at second by Middleton, who grounded to Rodgers. Zacher beat out an infield hit which might have been turned into a double play had West let the ball alone, and then came Murphy with his drive to center. Buddy Ryan allowed the ball to pass him and the pair on the bases tallied, with Murphy halted at third. Ness forced Middleton and Mitze fouled out to left.

For three innings Killilay held the Beavers hitless, after which his troubles started to accumulate. Bancroft started the third with a free pass and took third as Derrick slanted a single to right. Dosine was fanned, but Kores bounced a hit at third and Bancroft made the circuit.

Ryan's grounder to flirst scored as a hit, put Derrick safely on third base and Rodgers' sacrifice fly to Zacher was enough to register the runner at the plate.

With the score even the Northerners

With the score even the Northerners went into the lead in the seventh, this time thanks to Doc Cook. Rodgers grounded out to Killiay but Lober tripled to right field. Fisher hit to the pitcher and Lober was safely caught between bases with the infield taking turns in handling the ball. Plually Cook's foot tripped as he was to make a throw to Mitze guarding the plate and Lober scored. Fisher halted at third and West's fly to Zacher in deep center sent the runner home with time to spare.

time to spare.

That practically put the game on ice, but the Beavers cinched things up in the eighth and that with two men, berrick and Doane, retired.

There followed an avalanche of hits. Kores poled the ball to left. Ryan slammed to center and when Rodgers did the same thing Kores scored. Ryan and Rodgers worked the double steal and Lober's hit to center was just in time to send the two men flying for the rubber. The score:

"Iron Man" Joe McGinnity ended the game by a disgraceful attack on Umpire Shuster.

Seething with rage because Portland had applied the "boot" to him in the sixth inning, Joe took advantage of a trivial mistake by the arbiter on his balls and strikes and, after all was over, rushed upon the field with murder in his eyes.

Shuster's back was turned at the time, but that mattered not to McGinnity.

No question but that Shuster erred in calling "two and two" on McMullen in the ninth when the proper count was "three bails and two strikes." But the mistake made no difference in the ultimate result because McMullen struck out on the next bail.
