SEVERAL smart affairs marked yesterday as a notable one on the social calendar, prominent among them being the charming tea for which Mrs. James F. Ewing was hostess in honor of Miss Agnes Trimble, of Keokuk, Iowa. During the afternoon about 100 attractively gowned matrons and maids called to meet the charming visitor, who is the house guest of Mrs. Fletcher Linn. Another interesting visitor, Mrs. Arthur Sepholt, of Chicago, house guest of Mrs. Ewing, Mrs. Charles Warren, also received with the hostess and honor guest. The Ewing residence was a bower of beautiful pink roses, effectively arranged in the drawing-room and halls, while an artistic arrangement of blue delphinium and yellow iris enlivened the table. The hostess was assisted by several prominent matrons and a group of the younger contingent.

Another delightful affair was the bridge tea given by Mrs. Leroy H. Parker yesterday, when between 60 and 80 members of the exclusive set enjoyed her hospitality. Presiding at the table were Miss Ella Stephens, Mrs. David Loring, Miss Thomas D. Honeyman and Mrs. Harold M. Sawyer.

Mr. and Mrs. Sanford P. Lowengart (Miss Amy Dinkelspiel) arrived unexpectedly Monday evening and are domiciled at the Lowengart residence at Seventeenth and Davis streets. Many pretty compliments in the way of floral gifts are flooding their way to the charming and pretty bride.

An event anticipated with considerable pleasure is the informal dance to be given this evening by a group of jolly bachelors on Portland Heights. The guests will include the younger contingent, and the hosts include Walter Jelliff, Horace B. Coburn, Jr., Jennings F. Sutor, Aubrey R. Watzek and Philip Van Der Kar. she needs another assistant. Better still, let's jump on a subway and run down to see her together. Her name is Martha Tush, and she has a suite of offices in the Metropolitan building. What do you say?"

Marian accepted with eagerness, and a few minutes later the two were hurled through the subway tube toward Madison Square. Amazed at the originality of Miss Rush's shoppers' bureau, Marian felt more keenly convinced than ever of the great importance that originality which in New York City, its possessor may convert into money.

They were whirled by elevator to one of the lofty suites of offices in a famous business block, and found Miss Rush seated at a large, flat-topped desk firing dictation rapidly at her stenographer. She was a woman brimming with nervous energy, one of those feminine business dynamos which fairly click and spark. Marian on being presented to her, felt at once that she was in the presence of a superior being, of an alert and energetic participant in the big city's affairs.

"Sorry," she said, with apparently genuine regret, when she had listened to the explanation of the party and with this business of ours is that we require young women who know New York like a book. They've got to be able to answer any and every question our patrons ask or expect. Their curiosity about New York is insatiable, and they naturally expect our shoppers to be able to answer anything and everything. I am forced to pick assistants who can, without hesitating, lead a patron to the most out-of-the-way shop or eating-house between the Battery and the Bronx.

"Newcomers in New York have invariably read somewhere about some of the places that are famous, and they insist on being led to the most unheard-of places. Some friend may have told them to go and get their hats at Madame So-and-So's in some garret on Eighth avenue, where rents are cheap, but millinery goods dwindle. That's the way it goes, Miss Winthrop. Come and see me again, if you care to, after you've got a mental card index of all the nooks and crannies of the city, and then maybe I can try you out. You seem to have the right personality for a job like this."

More than ever, as she left the office of Miss Rush with Miss Barker, was Marian impressed with the difficulty of becoming a success in New York's business machinery. Her untidiness and her successful job hunting galled and depressed her.

"Here, here," broke in Miss Barker. "Miss Rush divorced her husband in Cincinnati and came to New York. She had never had a job in her life before, and for him to talk like that I think she's admirable."

Y. W. C. A. Notes

The regular executive meeting of the Y. W. C. A. board was held Tuesday at which reports from various working committees were given. Mrs. F. M. Warren, chairman of the house committee, reported 283 house guests during the month. Travelers remaining in the city for a few days or girls coming into the city on shopping tours from nearby cities find the association a homelike place to stay.

The association hopes in time to be able to have cottages homes throughout the city where girls may find permanent homes.

Mrs. R. W. Lewis made an encouraging report from the north branch and also from the East Side branch. Both of these branches are filling a need in the districts and the business girls of these neighborhoods express appreciation of the work being done.

The traveling aid work reported by Mrs. E. H. Strong showed that through the matrons at the different depots 1544 persons had been assisted in various ways during the month.

The green tea room and the cafeteria continue to be popular. Evidence of this is seen from the fact that a daily average of 629 meals were served during the past month. Men as well as women enjoy the good things served in the green tea room.

Portland Y. W. C. A. sent a message of congratulation to the Seattle Y. W. C. A. which on Tuesday last threw open the doors of their new association building built at a cost of $350,000.

Miss Hamel Moorehouse, treasurer of the association, after an absence of several months on account of illness, was given a glad welcome from the members of the board Tuesday.

Wedding Cakes.

Portland, Ore., June 6.—Will you please give me a good wedding cake recipe? I want to make my own cake, thanking you in advance. "BILLY TO

A CAKE that I have given many times under the title "Brother-killer" is one of the best I know for this purpose, but it has been given too recently to be reprinted at present.

Here, however, are four fruit cakes, any one of which I think you would find satisfactory for your purpose. They will keep well and are therefore useful for others to make besides "brides-to-be." While butter and eggs are "reasonable," Steaming for four to six hours before finishing in the oven is a good method with these cakes, as it makes them absolutely "that burned currant taste" frequently noticed in wedding cakes.

The frosting should not be put on until the cake is needed. Professional wedding cake-bakers let their cakes "ripen" six months. The method for mixing is the same in all the ordinary "butter cake method," using whole eggs.

Pennsylvania Fruit Cake.—One pound sugar, 1 pound butter, 1 1/2 pounds currants, 1/2 pounds raisins, 3/4 pound chopped citron, 1/4 pound candied cherries, 1/2 pound chopped figs, 1 grated orange peel, 1/2 pound almond, 1/2 cup strong coffee, 1/4 cup brandy, 12 eggs.

New Orleans Fruit Cake.—One pound sugar, 1 pound butter, 2 pounds brown sugar, 1 pound currants, 1/2 pound raisins, 1/2 pound candied citron, 1/4 pound candied cherries, 1/2 pound almond, 1/2 cup strong coffee, 1/4 cup brandy, 12 eggs.

When this cake is baked and cold set it on a dish and "baste" with 4 tablespoons brandy mixed with 4 tablespoons berry slightly sweetened, wrap in paraffin paper and then in heavy wrapping paper.

German Fruit Cake.—One pound sugar, 1 pound flour, 1 pound currants, 1 1/2 pounds raisins, 1/2 pound almond, cut dates, 1/2 pound, chopped dried peaches, 1/2 pound candied cherries, 1/2 pound almond and cut almonds, 1/2 cup whole strawberry preserves, the cup whole strawberry preserves, the juice and rind of 1 orange, 1/2 cup lemon, 1 teaspoon mace, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, 1/2 teaspoon cloves, 1/2 teaspoon almond extract, 1/2 cup brandy, 1/2 cup sour cream, 1/2 teaspoon soda.

1 pound flour, 12 eggs. The cream and soda may be omitted and 1/2 cup grape juice or coffee used instead.

English Royal Wedding Cake.—1 1/2 pounds butter, 1 1/2 pounds sugar, 1 1/2 pounds flour, 1 pound galled cherries, 1/2 pound currants, 1/2 pound citron peel, 1/2 pound orange peel, 1/2 pound lemon peel, 1 pound blanched almonds, 1 pound sultana raisins, the grated rinds of four oranges, 1/2 cup orange juice, 1/2 cup brandy, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon each cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg, 12 eggs.

It is usually most convenient to make these cakes in rather flat loaves, not more than 2 1/2 inches thick, put together to any desired height for the week and for him to take his covering the cakes, makes a perfect foundation for white icing. Cake pans must be lined with 2 or 3 thicknesses of greased paper. Covers should be used for steaming.

"My heart, of course," replied the Young Married Woman still looking surprised. "I hope I would never be anything but loving and kind to John."

"Which was the loving thing to do," relentlessly pursued the Grandmother, "sweep your house and have it immaculately clean, or make John happy by graciously entertaining his friend?"

"No."

"Then he should have been given the benefit of the doubt in this case. And though a man likes a well-kept house, his home stands to him for more than order. He usually takes special delight in feeling he can at any time bring a friend, sure of a gracious welcome and a good meal."

Little Discussions OF Love and Marriage BY BARBARA BOYD.

The Head or Heart Wife.

The Young Married Woman was looking a trifle troubled.

Grandmother waited, knowing the trouble would soon be aired.

"I wonder if I did wrong yesterday," mused the Young Married Woman, after a little.

"In what way?" gently inquired Grandmother.

"John phoned he wanted to bring a friend to lunch. It was my sweeping day and John knows I always sweep on Tuesday—I can't get my washing done till later in the week—and I told him it would mean I would have to put my sweeping off and upset all my routine for the week—and for him to take his friend to a restaurant. And he banged the receiver up, and last night at dinner was really very grouchy about my Tuesday, and for him to take his friend to a restaurant. I think it was very inconsiderate of him to expect to bring any one home."

Grandmother's eyes were a bit quizzical. Then she questioned: "Do you want to be a head or a heart wife?"

The Young Married Woman looked surprised. "I don't just understand," she replied.

"Was the house awfully dirty?"

"No."

"Was it a matter of great necessity that it be swept?"

"One has to keep one's house clean, John hates an untidy house."

"Yes, of course. And good house-keeping is most commendable. But are you going to let your head—your desire for routine and system and order—or your heart—the desire to be loving and thoughtful and kind—rule your home?"
