LASSEN PEAK QUITS VOLCANIC ACTIVITY

Hot Rocks, Ashes and Lava Replace Snow on Slope of Mountain in Cascades.

ACTION MAY BE GEYSER

Expedition to Start Out Today to Learn What Happened-Outburst First of Any Importance in More Than 200 Years.

REDDING, Cal., June 1 .- Mount Lassen, the southern terminus of the Cas-cade range, was quiet tonight after throwing out smoke, steam, rocks and volcanic ash for 18 hours. Tomorrow an expedition will start from Mineral, 18 miles distant, to learn whether a volcanic eruption really has ocmerely the outbreaking of a new gayser. The north slope of the moun-tain, snow-clad yesterday, was bare to-day for two miles, and in place of the melted snow, hot rock, ashes and lava were reported.

The outbreak is the first recorded in 70 years and the first of any importance in more than 200 years, although the Lassen volcanic district is at the western edge of a lava field reaching as far east as Montana and containing many craters.

W. J. Rushing, forest supervisor at Mineral, after receiving the report of a subordinate who was on the moun-tain yesterday, was inclined to believe that an active geyser suddenly had developed. He said that no fire had been seen, although the disturbance lasted all night. The smoke and steam column, he said, rose about 200 feet.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 1 .- Informa-SAN FRANCISCO, June 1.—Information obtained at the offices of the United States Geodetic Survey today shows that the latest violent volcanic eruption in the Mount Lassen district occurred about 200 years ago, the first violent outbreak occurring at least a century before the American Revolution. The estimated ages of the trees still standing in the deposits support
these geological observations.
A later and second period of eruption occurred about 70 years ago, but was
of such a character as not to attract

of such a character as not to attract attention. The presence of hot springs in the Lassen district at Bumpass' Hell Hole, near the south base of the peak, shows continued volcanic activity.

Penk of Recent Formation Geologically Lassen peak, which is of volcanic origin, is a recent formation, thrown up by action which began at the close of the Ione epoch and con-tinued until the present time. The geologic district in which Mount Lassen is situated is 69 miles long and nearly 53 miles wide, comprising an area of 3634 square miles. Lassen peak is the south terminus of the Cascade range of mountains. The Lassen peak volcanic ridge is formed by a belt of vol-canic cones 25 miles wide and 50 miles long. Lassen peak connects with Mount Shasta by laval deposits.

Peak in Greatest Lava Fields.

Extending, eastward over Northern California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana is the largest lava field in the world, according to the information contained in a report of a geological survey made in 1894 by J. S. Diller. The lava fields cover an area of 200,000 square miles. Cinder Cone Crater, a short distance from Mount Lassen, has a pit 245 feet deep. There are represented in the Lassen volcanic ridge 22 geological formations.

The report of the survey, made in 1894, draws a remarkable comparison between Cinder Cone and Mount Vesuving.
