Bigelow in Tilt With Mayor Says City Can't Afford It—His Vote Favors Favorable Action.

Because of objections of Commissioner Bigelow, an ordinance introduced in Council yesterday by Mayor Albee providing for increase in the salaries of many of the employees of the police, fire, health and public departments, failed to pass. The ordinance will go over for two weeks before being acted upon finally.

The Mayor proposed to have the measure passed with an emergency clause so as to take effect at once. Inasmuch as one member of the Council may prevent the passage of an ordinance with such an emergency, the objection of Commissioner Bigelow held the proposition up when every other member was in favor of its passage.

The arguments which ensued during consideration of the measure was another echo of the workings of the city's efficiency system, which is reported to have been a source of trouble and expense for the Council ever since it was put into effect, January 1.

Bigelow and Mayor Have Tilt. The action of Commissioner Bigelow brought a brisk tilt between him and Mayor Albee. The Mayor contended that the stand of Mr. Bigelow was unreasonable and unjust.

16 STORIES IS NEW LIMIT

Mayor and Commissioners Daily and Bigelow Decide Issue Raised by Meier & Frank Request for Special Permit.

By a vote of three to two the City Commission yesterday definitely decided to amend the city's building code so as to permit the erection of buildings 200 feet in height. This means that certain types of buildings can be made 16 stories high.

As the Meier & Frank desires to let contracts for its building at once, the commission brought the permit question to an issue. When the voting came, after a lengthy discussion, Mayor Albee and Commissioners Daily and Bigelow expressed a willingness to uphold the amendment.

It is said that an office building, with the usual high first story, can be erected under the new amendment to a height of 15 stories.
