

WILSON DRENCHED IN THUNDER STORM

Woman Pays Tribute to President's Mobile Declaration at Arlington.

MONUMENT IS ACCEPTED

Event Declared Impossible Except in Democracy—Nation Urged to Show Paths of Freedom to All World.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—A terrific thunder storm broke over Arlington National Cemetery today while President Wilson was addressing a great crowd gathered for the unveiling of the monument erected there to the Confederate dead.

Torrents of wind-driven rain drenched the blue and gray veterans, women and children before they could seek shelter, and then there was a wild dash for automobiles and trolley cars.

Party Thoroughly Drenched.

The ceremonies were held at the base of the magnificent monument in the Confederate section of the cemetery. The President, who had cut short his speech as the rising wind and darkening skies announced the storm's coming, hurried to his car with his two daughters, Mrs. McAdoo and Mrs. Sayre.

The machine's top afforded poor protection and the party was thoroughly drenched on the seven-mile drive back to Washington.

Woman Commends Mobile Speech.

Mrs. Daisy McLaughlin Stevens, president-general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, made the address presenting the monument to the President in behalf of the Women of the Confederacy.

"Yours, Mr. President, was Jefferson's spirit when at Mobile you said the United States had no interest in Mexico or any other foreign land, except to see that the citizens enjoyed the right to the pursuit of happiness under a constitutional and just government."

General Washington Gardner, Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, and General Bennett Young, Commander-in-Chief of the United Confederate Veterans, were notable figures in the audience, and both were cheered with equal enthusiasm by veterans in gray and those in blue.

General Lee's Grandson Speaks.

Colonel Robert E. Lee, grandson of General Lee, also spoke, while the sculptor, Moses Ezekiel, a Confederate soldier who designed the monument, was presented.

All speakers commented on the appropriateness of delivering the memorial to the Government through a Southern-born President, and when Mr. Wilson was introduced an enthusiastic reception was accorded him.

"I assure you that I am profoundly aware of the solemn significance of the thing that has now taken place. The Daughters of the Confederacy have presented a memorial of their dead to the Government of the United States. I hope that you have noted the history of the conception of this idea. It was proposed by a President of the United States, who had himself been a distinguished officer in the Union Army. It was authorized by an act of Congress of the United States. The cornerstone of the monument was laid by a President of the United States, elevated to his position by the votes of the party which had chiefly prided itself upon sustaining war for the Union. And now it has fallen to my lot to accept in the name of the great Government which I am privileged for the time to represent this emblem of a reunited people."

Event Significant of Democracy. "I am not so much happy as proud to participate in this capacity on such an occasion; proud that I should represent such a people. Am I mistaken, ladies and gentlemen, in supposing that nothing of this sort could have occurred in anything but a democracy? The people of a democracy are not related to their rulers as subjects are related to a government. They are themselves the sovereign authority and as they are neighbors of each other, quickened by the same passions and moved by the same motives, they can understand each other. They are not through with some of the deepest and profoundest instincts of human sympathy. They consult their government. They live their own life and they will not have that life disturbed and discolored by fraternal misunderstandings."

"This chapter in the history of the United States is now closed and I can bid you adieu with confidence to the future, quickened by the memories of the past, but with nothing to do with the contests of the past, knowing that we have shed upon each other opposite sides, we now face and admire one another."

Mankind's Burden to Be Lifted.

"The generosity of our judgment was made up soon after their great struggle was over, when men came and sat together again in the Congress and united in the efforts of peace and of government; and our solemn duty is to see that each one of us is in his own consciousness and in his own conduct a replica of this great reunited people. It is our duty and our privilege to be like the country we represent, and speaking no word of malice, no word of accusation even, standing shoulder to shoulder to lift the burdens of mankind in the future and show the paths of freedom to all the world."

The dominant figure of the monument unveiled today is a woman of heroic size, typifying the South in peace, surrounding a relief upon which there are 32 figures depicting the heroism of the South in war. It was dedicated to all heroes of the Confederacy. Flags of the Confederacy and the Stars and Stripes were draped together over the monument and decorated the speakers' stand. The "up stairs" band, grand "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "Dixie."

Mr. Ledyard said several important things happened that year while he was in Europe.

Billard Deal Angers Morgan. "In the first place," he testified, "the suit brought by the Government as a result of the acquisition by the New Haven of the Boston & Maine was discontinued. This was on June 24, 1899, and the Government's action confirmed the opinion of Mr. Olney and myself that the acquisition of the Boston & Maine was not a violation of the Sherman anti-trust act. "The bill to authorize the incorporation of the Boston Railroad Holding Company was approved by the Governor of Massachusetts about that time and the Billard contract was executed and on July 9 approved by the directors of both the New Haven and the New England Navigation Company. "By the time I returned home Mr. Billard had sold back to the navigation company the Boston & Maine stock. I went to a meeting of the executive committee of the New Haven board on October 2. I was outspoken in expressing my opinion regarding the Billard transaction and the big profit that had gone to Mr. Billard. Mr. Morgan was present and he also was angry about the matter. The dissatisfaction shown, I believe, resulted in Mr. Mellen's afterward saying that the profit could be cut down, but no resolution was adopted at the committee meeting.

Alteration of Record Suggested. "A year later, in July, 1910, on my return from another trip abroad, I saw Mr. Mellen in New York and he told me he had learned an erroneous record in the Billard case had been made in the New Haven meeting. He said it was misleading and might make trouble. He said to be: 'You know we never owned that stock or made the profits. That record indicates that Billard's profit belongs really to the New Haven.' Mr. Mellen wanted to change the record, but I reminded him the laws of New York strictly forbade anything of that sort."

Discussing the Pullman contract, Mr. Ledyard said he and Mr. Mellen were principally responsible for it. He said he told Mellen that he felt the only way to get steel cars at once would be by making such a contract and that he favored it.

"I had no interests whatever in the Pullman company," the witness said, "but on account of accidents that had happened I was anxious for the steel cars."

Mr. Ledyard said in September, 1912, he saw Mr. Morgan, who asked him to postpone his trip abroad and attend the next New Haven meeting, at which, Mr. Morgan said, Mellen was going to lay before the directors something in relation to the Grank Trunk.

Morgan Says He Does Not Know. "I wanted to know what it was," said Mr. Ledyard, "and Mr. Morgan said he did not know. I told Mr. Morgan if that matter came up he ought not to do anything until he had sought the advice of independent counsel, some able attorney. He asked me to suggest someone and I proposed Richard Olney of Boston."

"I went to Europe and returned in December to find a conflagration all around the New Haven and Mr. Mellen in process of being indicted. I saw Mr. Mellen and his story at that time was just about the same as he has told here about having been negotiating with Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Smithers of the Grand Trunk, in regard to some traffic agreement. He said he had secured the acquisition of the Northern & New England Railroad. He added: 'The papers are full of it. My office boy and my porter have been subpoenaed by the grand jury.'"

Mr. Mellen said: "While I was talking with Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Smithers, Mr. Morgan strolled in and jocularly asked what we had been talking about. We told him and he casually remarked that he would like to see us until we got the Northern & New England road. He went out and there was no more news."

"I told Mr. Mellen I did not think he could be indicted," Mr. Robbins said in and Mr. Mellen said he would dictate a letter to the United States attorney at New York. He called in a stenographer and did so. The stenographer, I think, brought the letter back and I think possibly Mr. Morgan made a few corrections."

"I want to say in most unqualified terms that Mr. Mellen did not offer himself as a vicarious sacrifice for Mr. Morgan. It was a matter of a man accepting responsibility; it was a letter of a man claiming innocence, for it was a letter to the District Attorney saying that as he was the only one who conducted whatever negotiations were made, as he was the only one who knew what had been done, therefore, he desired to go before the grand jury and tell his story of what those negotiations were."

Mr. Ledyard testified that the letter was written at the suggestion of himself and Mr. Robbins.

Mr. Ledyard said, came from Mr. Mellen himself. Mr. Ledyard then had acquiesced.

CARRANZA DELAYS ANSWER FOR TOUR

General Plans to Inspect Saltillo, and Meanwhile Mediators Are Waiting.

BRYAN STILL IS HOPEFUL

Subject of Ammunition Bound to Rebel Forces Uppermost in Washington—Badger Is Told to Watch Federal Boats.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Waiting on Carranza was the attitude of the Washington Government today insofar as progress in Mexican mediation was concerned. It was apparent that the constitutionalist leader was expected to make the next move in the diplomatic negotiations toward cessation of Mexican affairs, but no word had come tonight as to what that move would be.

Rafael Zubaran, General Carranza's chief representative in Washington, said: "I transmitted the note to General Carranza last night. He, I am sure, will give it all the necessary attention and consideration before sending an answer to the mediators, so that it probably will be two or three days before the response is dispatched."

Trip of Inspection Begun.

"General Carranza is about to leave for Saltillo on a tour of inspection which will operate to delay his decision, but this matter, of course, will be considered in preference to any other subject."

Asked about the chance for constitutionalist representation at Niagara Falls, Mr. Zubaran said: "Affairs are getting better, or, to quote Mr. Bryan's phrase, 'the situation is encouraging.'"

Apparently there was no attempt to disguise the attitude of the Washington Administration, although officials would not discuss the situation for publication. John Lind, who represented the State Department in dealing with the constitutionalists, urged them to use their influence to have their chief make favorable reply to the proposals of the South American mediators.

Luis Cabrera, who has been mentioned as a probable delegate to the peace conference should Carranza agree to participate in it, was proposed, was in conference with Mr. Lind for several hours.

Huerta's Gunboats to Be Watched.

While mediation waited on Carranza the subject of ammunition bound from the United States for General Carranza's forces was uppermost in the discussion in official quarters and it became known that Admiral Badger had been directed to watch the gunboats on the Mexican federal gunboats in the vicinity of Puerto Mexico, in view of reports from Mexico City that Huerta's forces were endeavoring to land at Tampico of the munitions en route to Carranza on the steamer Antilla.

Naval officials expressed doubt as to whether the Mexican boats could maintain a successful blockade of Tampico with their base of supplies so far removed from Tampico, even if no attempt were made by the American ships to prevent a blockade.

American Attitude Uncertain.

It was generally regarded here as likely that the ammunition shipped from Galveston, Monterey and New York Tuesday for the constitutionalists would reach their destination unimpeded.

Conflicting statements as to the probable attitude of the United States regarding shipment of arms to the Mexican contending factions were difficult to reconcile. In some quarters the view was expressed that the American Government would endeavor to prevent the delivery of arms to General Carranza's forces, even if it were possible to incline a favorable ear toward peace proposals at Niagara Falls.

It is pointed out that it would be easy for Admiral Badger to stop any of these consignments from entering Mexican ports if he were ordered to do so. While officials have asserted the right to stop such shipments at American ports, they have not yet made up their minds to extend their authority to the high seas so as to prevent the delivery of the goods.

ABDUCTION STORY TOLD

REV. SPURGEON SAYS 10 SPIRITED HIM OUT OF CITY IN AUTO. Several Hundred Said to Have Been in Hotel Lobby, but Police Cut Figures to 30 or 40.

DENVER, June 4.—Rev. Otis L. Spurgeon, of Denver, was today the principal witness at the trial of ten men charged with abducting and robbing the minister following the delivery of a lecture in which he attacked the Roman Catholic clergy.

Rev. Mr. Spurgeon told the jury that he was forcibly taken from his hotel on the night of April 5, placed in an automobile, spirited out of the city, beaten and robbed of $10. He said a crowd of 300 or 400 were in the lobby and about the building when the defendants entered his room and carried him away.

George R. Merritt, a police sergeant who had been sent to the hotel to protect the lecturer, and O. P. De Ford, the proprietor of the place, also testified.

De Ford said he believed there were not more than 30 or 40 in and about the hotel at the time Rev. Mr. Spurgeon was taken away.

BRYN MAWR PRESIDENT PLEADS FOR BETTER SYSTEM.

Need for Development of Reasoning Power in Students Declared Essential to Future Success.

PHILADELPHIA, June 4.—Miss M. Carey Thomas, president of Bryn Mawr College, in an address to the graduating class, today asserted that if institutions of higher education in the United States expected to meet effectively and successfully the new demands that are being made on them for advanced and scientific teaching methods, they must not themselves to the task of making the teaching profession more lucrative and more attractive.

By this means, she said, men and women capable of becoming brilliant teachers would be attracted to the educational field by the rewards offered by business, commerce and industry.

Dr. Thomas said the students of today were demanding new methods, more definite teaching and other improvements in the educational systems that made it imperative for the schools to stir themselves in an effort to get the services of brilliant, up-to-date instructors.

Dr. Thomas said the textbook and lecture systems in the schools are no longer effective, and these antiquated methods must be supplanted by more modern teaching systems that will develop the reasoning power in students. "If educators do not realize this," she said, "colleges will become places for the dead, not for the living."
