TODAY'S important event is the wedding of Miss Maureen Campbell and Jervis Webb, which will be solemnized this evening at the home of the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Campbell. After the ceremony, which will be witnessed only by relatives and close friends, a large reception will be held from 8:30 to 10 o'clock. Miss Campbell's family and friends are loath to have her leave them, as she is one of the most interesting and charming of the younger girls, and exceedingly popular both in musical and social circles.

Mrs. J. Wesley Ladd presided yesterday at a pretty luncheon in honor of Mrs. Mose Blum, of San Francisco, sister and house guest of Mrs. Sol Hirsch and Mrs. J. B. Montgomery. Today Mrs. Hirsch and her daughters, by Mrs. Blum, were the guests of Mrs. Ladd at a large tea in honor of Mrs. Blum.

Miss Mary Harris, of San Francisco, is the house guest of Mrs. Harris, at 560 Hoyt street.

Mrs. Bert C. Ball presided at a charming luncheon yesterday at the Waverly Country Club in honor of Miss Claire Houghton. Covers were laid for 15, and the table was attractively decked with pink hydrangeas and the new shade of blue delphinium. Dainty colonial nosegays marked the covers.

The engagement of Miss Leone Victoria, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Victoria, was announced at an afternoon party Wednesday on board the cruiser Boston. Miss Victoria is to become the wife of Spencer Spooner, First Lieutenant in the Oregon Naval Militia, of which the Boston is the home ship.

A party of a dozen girl friends of Miss Victoria were asked to trip down the river on one of the Boston's launches. They were taken to the Boston, where they found a dinner waiting for them. Mrs. Wilson B. Miller being the hostess.

The Society of Graduates of St. Helen's Hall will hold its annual reunion at the hall today, and an elaborate programme has been arranged.

A most enjoyable event of Thursday was the card party given for the past members' club of the Central Library, by Mrs. C. W. Miller at her lovely home, 468 Rodney avenue. Honors at cards were won by Mrs. Lillian Keyser, after which refreshments were served. Those who enjoyed the afternoon were: Mrs. L. M. Davis, Mrs. F. A. Watts, Mrs. W. S. Cutler, Mrs. A. H. Divorced Life

By Helen Hessing Fueselle.

MORE of the midnight hungry kept coming, and Marian, who had at length begun getting into the spirit of the Italian restaurant, watched the odd drama of life with interest. Her companion, the ingenue, who had drunk her way to the door, and part of Marian's, began to grow reminiscent.

"Reminds me some of Little Hungary," she said. "It's the famous place over on the East Side. Met a chap there who played the very devil with my life."

"Tell me about it," urged Marian with interest.

"Not very much to tell," continued the other soberly. The folks had sent me out here to New York to study dress-making. They wanted me to learn all the tricks of the trade, and then return to the little Indiana village and make dresses for the town awfully. I was strong for the idea—not! But New York looked like a good bet, and I came.

"Well, I met the fellow I was telling you about. He made a big hit with me, and I let him show me the sights, send me flowers and candy and run after me. Six weeks later, after we were married, I found out that he was only a book-keeper. He had passed me off as a chap about being a salesman for the Steel Corporation. It was some come-down. Believe me! He cooped me up in a little flat up in Harlem and tried to make me think I was happy. It was one little row after another, and finally the big smashup. That's how I happen to be on the stage."

Marian warmed to her companion with a fellow-feeling of one divorced toward another. "I'm divorced, too," she said simply.

"Really?" replied the other. "Then I guessed right."

"What made you think so?" inquired Marian.

"Oh, something sad and free," returned the actress vaguely. "Somehow I can usually tell. The stage is plastered with women who got matrimonially bumped. They hike to the stage like ducks to water. The stage door is getting to be a regular sign of the sisterhood."

Little Discussions OF Love and Marriage

BY BARBARA BOYD.

Finding Fun in Housekeeping. THE new bride was humming a little tune as she trotted around her sunny kitchen. She beat the eggs briskly for the pudding and arranged the tempting confection daintily in the new dishes she had bought for the purpose. "It is so pretty as a picture," she said to herself, as she eyed the golden yellow of the pudding and the snowy froth of eggs that topped it.

When she surveyed the dinner table with its spotless linen, its gleaming silver, its pretty china and its low dish of fragrant mint sauce and its fragrant butter, she thought, "if you do it right, wouldn't I rather make that good pudding and that pretty table than chase around hunting pleasure in some other form."

She went into the living-room. Bowls of roses mingled the air with fragrant perfume. Magazines lay handily about. Awnings kept out the heat and glare. The breeze that drifted in, lazily fluttered the curtains. She trotted around deftly placing a vase of flowers here, arranging a shade there.

"Making a home certainly is a pleasure," she said, dropping into a chair. "It is like painting a picture, a dozen pictures, a hundred pictures. Every room can be made a picture, and every picture a different picture. She glanced around at the flowers and books.

"Every meal can be a picture and every day a different picture. She thought, "if you do it right, wouldn't I rather make that good pudding and that pretty table than chase around hunting pleasure in some other form."

Two Rigid Requirements

Laurel Lodge, A. F. and A. M. entertained members of the Yoncalla, Oakland and Sutherlin Masonic lodges last night at their temple in this city. Following degree work, a banquet was served. There were about 140 persons present.

A vision of Minnie's house came to her as it was one day when she had visited it. Minnie had been making a cake. It was a heavy, wretched-looking object, and the kitchen was a spectacle of confusion. The living-room was untidy, the bedroom in disorder, the dining-room unswept and Minnie herself was in a dingy kimono with her hair in kinks.

"I'm going to chuck this job as soon as I can," Minnie had exclaimed in disgust.

And the new bride thought she, too, would "clunk the job," but not in Minnie's way. For had she been in Minnie's place she would have jumped in and made the house spick and span from cellar to roof. But no, she disagreed to herself with a whimsical smile, she would never have let the hats as she disliked housekeeping. I don't see how she could dislike housework, if she knew how to do it, and did it right, and made her home present.

"The Mikado" is produced by Jefferson High School Students. Stage Old Favorite.

"The Mikado," always a favorite, with its tuneful airs and entertaining plot, was presented last night at Jefferson High School by a clever group of students of the school and a repetition of the opera will be given tonight.

The "three little maids from school," "the Lord High Executioner" and all the other celebrities of the Flowery Kingdom appeared and won hearty applause from the audience. Some exceptionally good voices are possessed by the young students who made up the cast. The comedy was well brought out and the chorus work as well as house get in that condition, nor would she have undertaken to keep house until she knew something about it. She wished Minnie understood housekeeping as thoroughly as sewing linings in hats. For if she did, the new bride knew that Minnie would find it lots more fun, and the house she would then keep, a much happier place to live in than a boarding-house.

In 1875 we made the first Ground Chocolate.

We made it to meet two requirements. It had to taste good and it had to be absolutely pure.

After it was made we put a price on it, allowing for a legitimate profit.

Proper Thing Now Is to Peel Off Soiled Skin

Those who abhor sticky, greasy, shiny, streaked, complexion should religiously avoid creams, powders and rouges during the heated days. There's no need for them anyway, since the virtues of mercerized wax have become known. No amount of perspiration will produce any evidence that you've been using the wax. As it is applied at bedtime and washed off in the morning, the complexion never looks like a make-up. Mercerized wax gradually takes off a bad complexion, instead of adding anything to make it worse. It has none of the disadvantages of cosmetics and accomplishes much more in keeping the complexion beautiful, healthy, shiny and youthful. Just get an ounce of it at your druggist's and see what a few days' treatment will do. Use like cold cream.

Another effective Summer treatment—heat tending to cause wrinkles and flabbiness—is a skin-tightener made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in 4 pt. witch hazel. Its use (as a face bath) leaves no trace.—Adv.
