"Third-Streeters"

BY J. R. BENTON.

Respectfully dedicated to the "Third-Streeters."

There's a bunch of hearty greeters,
They call themselves "Third-Streeters."
Third street, you know, is wide and mighty long.
It's a good street, too, dog-gone it;
For there's lots of people on it,
And at Eight tonight they'll all be going strong.

There'll be march and counter-marches,
Underneath those big steel arches,
And a hot old time tonight. Come on along;
There'll be bands on all the corners;
Bands of dandy, strong-lunged horners,
So be sure and join that happy Third-Street throng.

Back to "Third Street," Good Old Third Street,
That wide and mighty long street,
Where there's room to turn around and walk along.
Where the lights will all burn bright
Sharp at eight o'clock tonight,
And that Third-street bunch will sing their Third-street song.
