"A Tale About Third Street"

Once upon a time a happy, public-spirited lot of men did business on Third Street in Portland. They had been plodding along in the same old groove so long that their vibrating bodies itched for a newer activity. Suddenly a germ infected the street. A man named Lee suggested that the completion of the great light arches should be the inspiration for a glorious celebration. The idea spread into a general contagion. Money was invited to finance the undertaking. Business men and property owners alike responded with unprecedented generosity and unanimity. Consequently the stage was set for the grand opening of "The Great Light Way," which nearly all of Portland's population witnessed last Saturday night. Last night the light consumption of over 87,000 watts an hour was turned loose again and the Sunday crowds again enjoyed the brilliance of that street. This monumental lighting scheme, the decorations, the music and the additional embellishments will be continued night after night indefinitely, the music and the additional embellishments will be continued night after night indefinitely. And the property and business owners along ex-Third Street will live happily and prosperously ever after.

I AM A MOYER SUIT

For twenty years I have stood for the utmost in Clothes-values in the Northwest.

I have been made a standard at Fifteen Dollars, because I taught men to know they could expect from me the style—the service—formerly thought impossible in Clothes at my price.

Each year I am worn by more men, because my masters are glad to tell their fellow-men how worthy I have been. Young men—men of every age and vocation, will find me ready to meet their ideas.

My fabric is all-wool—my tailoring is the best—my patterns are always up-to-the-minute.

You will find me waiting for you tomorrow at any of the Moyer Stores. I am the famous Moyer Fifteen-Dollar Suit!
