The tea table was presided over by Mrs. William L. Brewster and Mrs. Gordon Voorhes.

A charming musical programme was a feature of the tea given yesterday at Hotel Portland by Mrs. Harry S. McCracken. About 100 smartly-attired matrons and maids called during the afternoon and enjoyed the vocal selections by Mrs. Beatrice Dierke, who is an old friend of Mrs. McCracken, a pretty group of sub-debutantes assisted the hostess in her duties. The parlors of the hotel were decked prettily with profusion of La France and American Beauty roses. Little Miss Margaret North, niece of the hostess, received the cards at the door and distributed the programmes.

THE Ladies' Social Union of the First Methodist Episcopal Church was entertained yesterday afternoon at the beautiful new home of Mrs. Frederick Drake, 108 Royal Court, Laurelhurst. It was an all-day meeting, including a short business session and an elegant luncheon served at noon, and the remainder of the time was devoted to sewing for needy families. ported through the following chairmen of committees, were especially gratifying for the last month: Sick and needy visitation, Mrs. F. W. Cookman; church calls, Miss Anna Finley; Sunday school, Mrs. J. W. Stewart; sewing, Mrs. C. D. Ott; programme for monthly meetings, Mrs. Nettie Greer Taylor; programme for entertainments, Mrs. J. Divorced Life

By Helen Nassong Fuesle.

MARIAN was less offended than humiliated at Meadows' offer to lend money to her. She had the feeling that to be in need of ready money is to be disgraced, especially if the fact becomes known to others. She also felt woman's instinctive distrust of a man who offers her money. She had seen enough of the world to know that invisible strings are almost invariably attached to such propositions, and that a woman usually has to pay a price that is much more than the mere equivalent of what she has received.

Little Discussions OF Love and Marriage

By BARBARA BOYD.

THE New Bride carefully wrapped up the bill roll she had bought and cast about in her mind's eye where to place it. "I want him to come upon it unexpectedly," she thought with a whimsical smile, "and to find it addressed to himself, and wonder what it is, and how it got there." She finally decided to tuck it among the things in his bureau drawer. "He goes to his lodge meeting tonight and he'll dress after dinner. And when he is rummaging around in his drawer for his cuffs and tie and things as he always does, he'll find it." So she snuggled it down among his handkerchiefs, and then began her preparations for dinner. And while she was clearing away the dinner dishes, having left the door to upstairs ajar, she heard a surprised exclamation, then a low whistle of delight, then, "Allison, where did this bully wallet come from?" "Wallet?" surprised. "What wallet?"

"A beauty. Here in my drawer. Addressed to me." She went up to his room. She surveyed the pocketbook with pretended amazement. She appraised the quality of the leather with discreetly appreciative frowns. "You must have an admirer," she said, professing fierce suspicion and jealousy. "But the gleam in her eyes and ring in her voice betrayed her. "You little witch," said the New Bride, kissing her. "That's one of your tricks. And I wanted a new wallet so ceremonial and the surprise is almost as jolly as the gift."

If you are dark and easily tan, you are fortunate, as your lighter complexioned sister will tell you. Tan has a certain irritating feeling, but is not to be compared with the awful looking and worse feeling sunburn. Yet one may go to the sun without permanent burning if one will follow a few simple rules.

After bathing and before dressing, coat the skin thickly with talcum powder or corn starch, which is just as good. Leave this on until you are dressed, then pat off with a soft cloth. There will remain a thin coating. Several times a day dust on plenty of powder or starch and let it remain on for a minute, two before patting—not rubbing—off. When you come in from the sun, before doing anything else, dust on some of the same powder. It may seem hard, but as a matter of fact, it is hard to dab on powder every time you pass your dressing table. If it is, I must say that most of the girls I know like hard work.

Do not put water on your skin when it is hot, no matter how much you may be tempted to do so. Cleanse your skin with cream if it seems at all red or burned or use water only when the flesh has thoroughly cooled. When you have been in the sun take care not to break the skin or bruise it in any way. As soon as the burn is felt rub it immediately with carbolic vaseline, or plain vaseline with purified salicylic acid. The first mentioned is best. Then dust over with powder, using only cream to cleanse the skin until the soreness has entirely disappeared.

Home Treatment for Sallow, Wrinkled Skin

A. C. F. asks: "What should I do for my sallow complexion, and how can I get rid of my wrinkles?"

Sallowness is best removed by removing the skin in tissue. This is effectually accomplished by the use of ordinary macerated wax, which causes the sallow, fenestral outer skin gradually to peel off, in fine particles scarcely noticeable to the naked eye. With a wash or so you will have an enviable complexion, the new skin exhibiting a beautiful, wondrous tint incomparable with artificial coloring. Get an ounce of this wax at your druggist; apply at night like cold cream, only do not rub it in. Ward it off in the morning with warm water.
