GRAIN CROP HOLDS GOLD

End of Unusual Exportation of Metal

Nears End, Say Officials.

Department officials are confident the unusual exportation of gold is drawing to an end and predict there will be to an end and predict there will be to an end and predict there will be little gold exported from now on which had not been contracted for before the exchange rate fell. The sudden decline in the exchange rate to a point where the exportation of gold is no longer highly profitable is taken as an indication that the heavy shipments of Indication that the heavy shipments of gold already made to Europe have satisfied the demand in a measure and a further decline is expected by the Treasury Department.'

"The experiation of gold is bound to cease with the movement of the grain crop from the United States to Europe," George E. Roberts, director of the mint, remarked today, "Europe has already begun to buy large quantities of Amerthe wheat is not
