BY LEONIE CASS BAER.

All along "The Road to Happiness," with side jaunts into its sweetly fragrant highways and byways, William Hodge led the Heilig audience last night. And, as we pressed on after him, adown the flower-strewn roadway, we sang with him the count-your-blessings chant of happiness.

Like the fabled pathway that follows to the end of the rainbow and there discloses a pot of gold, this path, too, has a promise at its ending. The promise is that of contentment, and, and only a fine courage and a high resolve will bring one safely to the journey's end.

Roadway Leads to Simple Life.
That part of the highway we traveled last night under William Hodge's splendid direction led us into a village, along a sweet-smelling, dusty road, right into a "front yard," with a canary dipping and whistling in a cage, swinging from an old apple tree, and under whose shade was a man from home, putting away at a tool bench. A collie barked in and out of the yard and a red old man drives past on a flea-bitten, spavined old horse, pausing at the gate to exchange the usual and prescribed rural salutations and queries.

A sweet-faced, little, old, gray lady sits in a wheel chair under the tree, and when her busy hands cease their homely task of mending, they flutter among the leaves of Mrs. Eddy's book on "Science and Health."

Gentle Science Dramatized.
In actual fact, the play is the gentlest, most unpretentious application of the doctrine of science dramatized. It is done unostentatiously. Only once is the kindly doctrine mentioned, the book is shown but once, and somewhere near the end of the unfolding we see that the little, old, gray lady has left her wheel chair.

This play of Hodges' is described on the programme as a pure play. From the standpoint of morals it is absolutely pure and it is purely a play.

It is of "The Old Man and the Sea" variety with a villainous old father, who drives an innocent stepdaughter out from under his roof, and the kindly, unworshiped hero, Hodges' role, taken by her home. Takes along also the baby in the basket that has been left on the doorstep, just after the girl returns from an unexpected absence.

The villain and his stool, the village parson, and a bucolic youth, who is trying to part the hero from his girl, gather to paint the hero with tar and feathers.

Hodge Delivers Sermon.
Then he plants fear in their minds by thrusting his hand to his gun pocket and what they stand in terror of their lives, he delivers some scathing, verbal solar plexus blows and with a flip of his white kerchief, leaves them gasping in the air.

It certainly has been written for William Hodge, and its rich, Hoosier dialogue, Indiana home-spun wit and genial philosophy, fit Hodge like a fine garment.

Reneva Greenwood and Gertrude Hitz have light, girlish roles. Miss Greenwood as Jim's fiancée, and Miss Hitz as the girl who is driven out.

Villain Is an Achievement.
Scott Cooper's picturing, vocal and dramatic, of the irascible, old, rascally father, Hardcastle, is an achievement and becomes a gem in character drawing.

A. J. Evans as Phil Hunt, is a youngster of 18, who breathes optimism, and Edwin Melvin, as an old judge, makes his presence laughable though on for only a brief time.

Eugenie Woodward, as Jim's mother, plays with gracious, womanly dignity. A half dozen more, all players of distinction, round out the cast.

The scenes are four and are unusually attractive.

The play stays all week at the Heilig, with only one matinee, on Saturday.

WHITNEY KEEPS POWER

Toronto Election Returns Majority Control in Legislature.

TORONTO, June 29.—The elections for the Legislature held throughout the province today resulted in the return of Sir James Whitney's government to power with a slightly decreased majority. In the last House the opposition mustered 18. In the new House the straight Liberals will number 25, with three Independents, one each from the Labor, Temperance and Independent Liberal parties. The composition of the new House will be as follows: Conservatives, 83; Liberals, 25; Labor, 1; Temperance, 1; Independent Liberal, 1. Total seats, 111. Counting new seats, the Conservatives have gained 9 and the Liberals 13.

All the cabinet ministers with the exception of Dr. Reaume, Minister of Public Works, were re-elected with large majorities.

POLLING SITE TOPIC

Use of Schoolhouses Considered at Joint Meeting.

DISCARDING TENTS URGED

Precinct Revision Discussed by City, County and School Officers—Cooperation in Highway Work Also Is Suggested.

Feasibility of discarding the old tents used for polling places, revising the precinct organization of the county, and utilizing the public schoolhouses for polling places was considered at the joint city, county and school officers' meeting in the Courthouse last night.

R. E. Holman, of the County Commission; O. M. Plummer, of the School Board, and R. G. Dieck, of the City Commission, were appointed on a committee to investigate the subject thoroughly and ascertain if the plan can be put into effect.

The tents are the joint property of the city and county, but have not been used recently, owing to the refusal of judges and clerks of election in several precincts to serve in such quarters.

Discarding of Tents Favored. Commissioner Holman last night advanced the idea of discarding the tents entirely and co-operating with the schools to provide polling places. He pointed out that election materials could be stored permanently in the schoolhouses and the great expense of hauling and distributing it at each election would be eliminated.

It was suggested that the legal phases of the question be looked into and that the committee find out whether it could be possible to leave the precinct divisions unchanged and have voters of several precincts use the same schoolhouse for a polling place.

As to the tents, it was suggested by Mr. Holman and approved by all present, that the tents could be loaned to organizations which are seeking to establish outing camps and fresh-air resorts for the benefit of the children of the city.

Other Subjects Considered.
Mr. Brewer emphatically urged, however, that the tents ought not to be loaned to any organization which is conducting a "fresh air camp" for the use of which charges are made.

The School Board was asked to consider at its meeting Thursday the appointment of a special committee to co-operate with Mr. Brewer in plans for establishing playgrounds on various school properties this winter. The subject of swimming tanks intended for public schools in the city, Mr. Brewer announced that if the School Board could arrange for them to have an entrance by which they could be reached without passing through the schoolhouses, and thus fit them to be used as public swimming tanks, the city would be only too willing to furnish water gratis.

City and county also may find a point of co-operation in the work on the Columbia Highway. Mr. Brewer suggested to Mr. Holman last night that if the road is in readiness for such purposes this winter, the city may be able to use it to advantage as a means of furnishing work crushing rock in case the problem of unemployment in the winter is acute again in Portland next winter.

2 BOYS GET FARM WORK
C. F. WRIGHT HIRES LADS TO DO CHORES DURING SUMMER.

Appeal of Associated Charities in the Oregonian Answered—6 Others, One Widow's Son, Eager to Earn Money.

As a result of the story in the Oregonian of the five boys who asked the Associated Charities to find them places on farms where they might work during the summer because they did not want to be a charge on the fund for the fresh air children, two boys, Ernest and Arthur, yesterday were placed on a farm. They left in the morning, the happiest boys in Portland. Their employer is C. F. Wright, of Portland, who owns a farm near Dayton.

The boys are especially fond of animals and Mr. Wright assured them that there are "all kinds of live stock" on the farm, from puppies to horses. There are plenty of chores to do and berries to pick and the owner of the farm agreed to let the boys pay their way and earn a little money on the side attending to this work.

Three other boys, in addition to the original five, applied to the Associated Charities yesterday to be placed on farms. They are willing to work their way and desire to pass a longer time in the country than the two weeks that is given in the fresh air excursions.

"Joe," aged 14, and "Albert," 10, are the boys who want to go where there are animals on the farm, for they like pets. Joe announced that he can milk a cow and that he wants to take his little brother along, "to help him with the chores."

Another applicant is the 14-year-old son of a widow, who wants a chance to be in the country and thinks that
