Brakeman Frank Earls declares

Immedia was wounded.
 Brakeman Frank Earls declares there were many humorous incidents in connection with the holdup and that, even with the mumle of a black six, he could hardly keeep from laughing.
 In taking the crew forward the face, he foot hardly keeep from laughing.
 In taking the crew forward the robbers picked up all of the Pullman porters in sight, too, and Earls declares some of them wore the mest slokly pallor he ever saw. One was shining the shoes of sleeping passengers at the time and, when told to put up his hands, he held onto one shoe. During all the trip forward he held that shoe aloft and, even after reaching the streepress car, kept his hands and the shoe in the air. One of that shoe, you'll get the analy holding up your hands, he said.
 The porter pulled down his hand and hooked at the shoe in utter amazement, looked at the shoe in utter amazement.

I realized we had been held up and I drew back quickly and hid my valuables under my pillow. I heard some of the train crew swearing. When I awoke, the robbers evidently had left the cars. Men passengers near me were joking about the occurrence. "I believe I must have slept through the worst of the adventure but I was conscious enough of it to give me a thrill and to realize what it means to be literally face to face with desperate men." Mrs. McDuffy, wife of the wounded efficer, came to Pendiaton by auto-mobile from Heppner this evening, ac-companied by their 6-months-old baby. They are at the hospital with the hus-
