Anthropologist Last Reported With Transportation Back to Camp. Cantain Has Recovered.

'OTTAWA, Ont., July 8,-Two parties. of four men each, who set out from the wrecked Arctic steamer Karluk, of the Stefansson expedition, ten days have perished. That they cannot have survived their attempt to reach civilization is the conclusion reached by the Deputy Minister of Marine here today after reading the latest report from Captain Bartlett, who commanded the Karluk. Captain Bartlett is now at Island. The other sought an unknown through the Arctic night.

Neither Party Heard From.

The supporting party which accompanied the first party returned and reported that progress had been stopped by open water three miles from shore. Four men were left with provisions on the edge of the ice, waiting for a chance to land. That was the last heard of them. The four were Officer Alexnder Anderson, of Inverkeithing, Fifeshire, Scotland; Second Officer Charles Bartlett, Seaman John Bredy and Seaman Archibald King, all of Victoria

The second party consisted of Henry Beuchat, of Paris the anthropologist of the expedition; Alister Forbes-Mac-Kay, of Edinburg, the surgeon of the expedition; James Murray, of Foxfield. Hants, England, the oceanographer of the expedition, also a Shackleton man, and Thomas Morris, sailor.

This party was seen a week later by an exploring expedition from the main are closed. It is reported starvation party, which reported that Beuchat's will bring on more trouble shortly unparty, which reported that Beuchat's hands were frozen and he seemed to be in poor shape, but that he refused offore of assistance and transportation back to camp. That was the last heard of the second party.

The main party, of 14 white men and several Eskimos, left their camp at the scene of the wreck February 1 and set out for Wrangell Island, which they reached March 12 after a hard struggle. Captain Bartlett, with an Eskimo, left, seeking help. It took him 17 days with a dog team to reach the Siberian coast, about 50 miles west of North Cape, after a journey of 150 miles. From his landing point Bartlett made a 50-mile journey on land to Emma Harbor, where he subsequently was picked up by the whaler Herman, Captain Peterson.

Captain Suffers Greatly.

A letter from Peterson says that Captain Bartlett was in bad shape, On the long sledge journey his hands and feet had been badly frozen and he was suffering greatly.

Bartlett, apparently recovered, is now at Nome, waiting for the American revenue cutter Bear to take him, with supplies, to Wrangell Island. When Captain Bartlett left Wrangell Island the 12 men who remained were apparently in good shape. Since navigation will not open until the end of August, no word of the parties can reach civilization until Fall. Dr. Alister Forbes-MacKay, surgeon of the Stefansson expedition, was born at the Fall of Cantyre, Scotland, February 22, 1874, and is a son of Colonel Alexander Forbes-Mackay, of the Nine-ty-second Gordon Highlanders. He studied botany, zoology and medicine at the University of Edinburgh, interrupting his studies to enlist in the City Imperial Volunteers of London for serv ice in South Africa in the war against
