Divinely Figured Mermaid Splashes and Dances 'Neath Waters and Above Them in Swirling, Thrilling Kaleldoscopic Motion.

Once upon a time "A Modern Eve," musical play of enticements, came to the Heilig. That was the dreary night of January 6, 1913, and that "Modern Eve" lured the Heilig Theater from its new home at Broadway and Taylor -get the "and"-to the building at Eleventh and Morrison streets. There the Heilig stayed until last night.

Last night a "Modern Venus" came for a return engagement and wooed the Heilig Theater, as an institution, back to its old domicile, Broadway "at" Tay-lor. There's a difference and a distinc-

lor. There's a difference and a distinction between "at" and "and" and henceforth, so far as the Hellig is concerned, it now is at "Broadway at Taylor."

This "modern Venus" who came last night is none other than Annette Kellerman, the toe dancer of form divine, actress bewitching and swimmer and diver extraordinary. Annette was not in Portland in the flesh, but she was very vividity portrayed upon the screen of the moving picture production of "Neptune's Daughter," a thrilling and exciting Bermuda Island splash of artistry.

It wen a large following of women, who came to view and study the much-advertised physical eloquence of Miss Kellerman's proportions and to wonder at the beauty and splendor of the scenes in the play. It also won a following from the sterner sex and "big business" resulted for the week. The return engagement, which opened last night to run all this week. 2:30 to 10:30 P. M., continuously, was

In "Neptune's Daughter" Miss Kellerman is interesting; exotic as well as daring. Her role is unconventional as well as romantic, and it really is an attainment. The seven reels are novel in the extreme and the production, as a whole, is a moving picture that is "different."

Big houses throughout the day and night ushered the Hellig "back home." The pictures will stay all week.

All the types of fun, melody and dance that go with the best of the notable Scotch stage presentations are found wrapped up in a great big and attractive package in the headline act at the Empress Theater this week unat the Empress Theater this week under the title "Kinkaide Kilties."
Not only did the act take the four Sunday audiences by storm yeaterday, but the extremely clever actors in the cast—11 in number—gave repeated encores. The substance of this stellar revue consists of the most popular of the Scotch ballads with solos and dance accompaniment and chorus, and there also are interpretations of the over-welcome dances of the Highlanders.

Joe Cook, the comedian, gives an entire vaudeville show by himself.

Frank Byron, the droll comedian, who has been scattering laughter who has been scattering laughter around the vaudeville arena since the days when the first joke wore short pants, is back again, and the vehicle is called "The Dude Detective."
