piles or a single weapon, leaving even his clothes at the edge of the forest, Knowles will battle for his existence, just as the cave man battled centuries ago before the dawn of history. Preliminary scouting trips into the wilderness have occupied his time dur-ing the few days since he arrived here. In company with Professor T. T. Wa-in company with Professor T. T. Wa-terman and a newspaper man. He has terman and a newspaper man. He has In company with Professor T. T. Wa-in company with Professor T. T. Wa-terman and a newspaper man. He has chosen the Three Creeks Camp district, where he will put his knowledge of woodcraft and sportsmanship to the test. There he will wring existence from the wilds with his bare hands and such weapons as he can fashion from sticks and stones.

Start Near Boundary.

The Three Creeks Camp country is at the boundary of Oregon and Cal-ifornia. It is said to be as complete a wilderness as is to be found on the a wilderness as is to be found on the whole Pacific Const. Old-timers in Southern Oregon, who have taken great interest in Knowles' proposed exper-plications on file, although some tim-plications on file, although some tim-Southern Oregon, who have taken great interest in Knowles' proposed exper-iment, say they would not care to at-tempt a similar feat. Given a gun, clothes, matches, salt and tobacco and they would agree to stay in the woods all Summer, but without these neces-sities they are dublous. They are even now wagering that Knowles will not last his month out.

The nature man has picked out his starting place. It is Indian Creek. Next Monday he will hand his clothes. Watch, matches and everything he pos-esses to someone, and, with Professor Waterman, will disappear into the woods, not to return until a month has passed. At that time he under-takes to be clothed in rude fashion, a beau meined big living from nature to have gained his living from nature without help and expects to put on weight and gain health in the ordeal. Professor Waterman will remain at a headquarters camp in the forest to give and dusters camp in the forest to give aid if needed and to keep close watch that the test which Knowles has set himself shall be conducted fairly. Cedar Tree His Mainstay.

Knowles declares he will succeed. His preliminary faunts into the woods have shown him what he may expect in the weay of food from trees and vines, as well as indications of game. He lov-ingly stroked a cedar tree which he found, for he declares that he depends upon it more than on any other tree in the woods. Knowles found he knew all but two or three of the trees he has found on his preliminary excursions. Berries and buil thisties, of which he eats the meaty heart, were plentiful. He also found watercreas by the witter courses and nuts and edible roots. There is plenty of game in the district and he expects to trap and kill such as he needs for food. Fire he will make by on a similar trip to that I have just made, I would have seen 50 deer. Here, I saw the tracks of but one. But 1 know there is game there somewhere and I shall find it. But

and I shall find it. "My experiment will be more dif-ficult here than in Maine. There the streams have grapes and other vege-tation at their edges where the dear come to feed. Here the edges of the creeks are rocky and full of gravel. The deer stay on the higher ground of the form the stars to find.

The deer stay on the higher ground and therefore are not so easy to find. "My whole plan of catching a deer will be changed. It is barely possible that I shall have a hand-to-hand con-flict with some of the wild animals. If I do, it will be worth tailing about 1 once broke a deer's neck by twist-ing its head and I bolieve I can do it again. I shall try, anyhow.

Gray Wolf Doesn't Frighten.

"I have heard of a gray timber wolf with cubs that was seen lately in the with cubs that was seen lately in the mountains where I am going, and I would like nothing so well as to get that wolf. If I could, I would have a coat made that would rival anything I know of. They say she stays on the top of the mountains where the deer are, and I am going straight there the moment I am free from civilization. "I know I can exist in this country aven I I do not see any game. But even if I do not see any game. But that is not the idea of this experi-ment. I am doing this to show that the man of today is the equal of his the man of today is the equal of his other foolish things. I've my mind set on that wolf now and I want it. I tell you if I get my eyes on her I will

"I find that I am as strong as ever, even after a Winter during which I practically did nothing. I want to harden my feet a little and that is the reason I am waiting until Monday to even J am anylous to get in and set out. I am anxious to get in and my feeling last night as I lay and looked up at the stars was one of entire contentment, the like of which have not experienced for months. It is the only life, the life in the open. "The drive from Grants Pass to the the only camp near the Josephine County caves, from which we start, is one of the most beautiful I ever took in all my life. The ride was a long succession of sur-prises and, if I do nothing more in the woods than study the woods and plants with which I am not familiar. I shall be well repaid for my trip into this coun-try I have chosen for my experiment.

Bear Killing Is Easy.

"Woodsmen with whom I have talked know that I am telling the truth when I say I can trap a bear and kill him with a club. Why, a bear can be as easily killed as a woodchuck. All you have to do is to hit him on the nose with a club you can swing in one hand. with a club you can swing in one hand. People ask me what I would do if I met a bear in the woods. Why, I wouldn't do anything. That old bear couldn't get out of the way fast enough. I would rather sleep out I there in the woods with the bears than in the finest hotel anywhere." Three Creeks Camp is 50 miles from the railroad. Six miles from this point Knowles will begin his struggle with nature. Most of the country he will with a club you can swing in one hand
