

FIGHT FOR WARBURG WILL WAIT ON JONES

Administration Senators Concentrate Efforts on Chicagoan's Confirmation.

VOTE WILL BE DELAYED

Effort by Representative Oglesby in Mr. Warburg's Behalf Brings Statement No 'Negotiations' Have Been Authorized.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Administration Senators, who are urging the confirmation of Thomas D. Jones, of Chicago, as a member of the Federal Reserve Board, worked strenuously today to bring in the names of their Democratic colleagues who have expressed opposition to the President's nominee.

Whatever the outcome, it was made practically certain that there would be no vote for several days.

The Administration will not push its fight for the confirmation of the nomination of Paul M. Warburg, of New York, until the Jones nomination has been acted on.

Warburg Refusal Explained. Representative Oglesby, of New York, had a talk with Acting Chairman Hitchcock today and strongly urged a favorable report on Mr. Warburg, regardless of the latter's refusal to appear before the committee to be questioned. Mr. Oglesby spoke of the qualification of the banker for the post and the sacrifice he would make, and that Hitchcock got the impression that Mr. Warburg declined to accept the committee's invitation because he thought he would be uselessly heckled and embarrassed.

Reports of this interview reaching Mr. Warburg caused him to send this telegram to Representative Oglesby: "I have just been shown a dispatch from Washington which will doubtless appear in tomorrow's papers stating in substance that you have opened negotiations in my behalf with Chairman Hitchcock looking toward my appearance before the committee, and that you have stated that my unwillingness to appear before the committee was due to my fear as to the scope of its questions."

Report Declined Incorrect. "I am sure that this report is incorrect and I have much hope that you will correct it in time to prevent its publication in tomorrow's papers, making it clear that I neither authorized nor encouraged any negotiations on my behalf. It is very important that this should be done clearly and promptly, inasmuch as the report which actually has been put out gives an entirely incorrect statement of my position, the publication of which I should sincerely regret."

Representative Oglesby immediately replied advising the banker that he had opened no negotiations in his behalf, and had not attempted to state his position, because he did not know what that position was.

TRIAL BRINGS PARDON NEWS

Portland after he came as a grand jury witness to get information against his former associates at the game.

He denied telling inmates of the county jail that "if he had money he would fight," and that a Government agent had been there to get him to plead guilty, but admitted that he told other prisoners that he thought that "if his wife came down he could get off with a light sentence."

So rapidly did he talk and so closely did Attorney Strahan crowd him with questions that Miss Mary E. Bell, official court stenographer, was compelled to halt them several times to catch up, although she can take with ease the usual court proceedings.

Harper was voluble. He was willing to tell not only what Mr. Reames and Mr. Strahan wanted to know, but a great deal more, so that they had to stop him repeatedly.

He said in telling the truth was no good" in selling the locations. He went to Grants Pass, he said, following Judge Wolverson's forcible detentions in Astoria, and he said that the whole land grant restored to the United States, to see J. T. Burns, who had been selling "locations."

My Declared Necessary. "I, Burns, at this time was a very small weakling at the game," said Harper. "He had taken 'locations' as low as $2 apiece."

He said that Burns made money after he had told him how. "His system of telling the truth was no good," said Harper. "You fellows who necessary to resort to falsehood," asked Strahan. "Absolutely," said Harper. "I can prove that other agents told me it could be done on the square."

secured several locations Miller "ditched" him and left town without giving him his commissions.

Harper went to Coeur d'Alene, selling "locations," and paying little attention, he said, as to whether the same location was sold more than once. He was not there long and returned to North Yakima, where he remained a year, selling "probably 20 or 30" in that time.

Talking on Sellers' connection with the proposition, Harper said Sellers called him up in Seattle from Tenino, Wash., and told him he had a lot of people there who wanted to locate.

Fourteen Booked in Day. "I went out to Tenino and wrote 14 that day," said Harper. "I made few representations. They weren't necessary. Sellers had the business all booked up. He got a commission of $15 for each."

Then, he said, he went back to Seattle and Sellers, Logan and he went out to Cle Elum, where nine applications were written. Sellers getting $15 each. He said that Sellers did not pay for his own claim to his knowledge and that a printed letterhead was paid for in commissions.

Then he severed connection with Logan, he said, and he and Harper went to Tacoma and opened an office as "Harper & Sellers." This partnership, Harper said, continued five or six months, when he went back to Seattle and his trade as a barber.

A printed letterhead was introduced as evidence, bearing the words: "Harper & Sellers, promoters. We make it a business to take your ideas—we make them pay you—we pay ourselves."

Harper said he knew that the system he and Sellers adopted was crooked. Frank E. Haight, a transfer man of Cle Elum, was a witness yesterday morning. He told of proceedings through the agency of Logan, Sellers & Harper.

He repeated the old story of being assured that it was a "sure thing" and that he "couldn't lose, whichever way the railroad suit went."

Logan, Sellers & Harper never told him there was a $17,000 mortgage on the railroad land and if they had he would never have invested, he said. He paid $300 for applications for himself and his wife for land in Douglas County.

Frank Holstrom, a Seattle streetcar motorman, said he was told that the land on which he "located," which he was to receive in 90 days, was worth $5000.

Ludwig Wallin, of Tacoma, answered an advertisement, he said, and paid $75 for a "location" in Coos County, which was afterward changed for one in Douglas County, for which he paid $50 more.

"They told me it would be better if I went right down there and settled," said Wallin, "and then when the suit was finished in the Oregon courts, I would be an actual settler. They said I could get a cabin built for from $20 to $50 and offered to have a man build it."

SEMPLEANT KILLE POLICE BATTLE

Detectives and Members of Moral Squad Clash in Chicago Vice District.

THREE OTHERS WOUNDED

Special Investigators, Who Have Incurred Enmity of Regular Force, Accused of Having Lost Heads. Sixty Shots Are Fired.

CHICAGO, July 16.—Stanley J. Birns, a police sergeant in the detective bureau under Captain John Halpin, was shot to death in a pistol battle between two squads of detectives in the vice district tonight.

Detective John Sloop, Birn's partner; Joseph T. Merrill and Fred Amert, detectives under M. L. C. Funkhouser, deputy superintendent in charge of the morals squad, and a fireman named Carrow were wounded. Sixty shots were fired.

Detectives Schubert and Cary, of the Twenty-second street police station, broke up the riot and took Amert, whose wound was slight, to the station, where he is being held.

Captain Deles Friction. Captain J. P. Ryan, of the Twenty-second street station, in whose precinct the shooting occurred, denied that friction between officers working out of the detective bureau and his station investigator of the morals squad had anything to do with the shooting. He asserted no shot would have been fired if Amert and Merrill, who have been on the force for 60 days, had not lost the head to close it.

Hangers-on Hoot Detectives. After the prisoners seized in the raid had been sent to a downtown station the four detectives started east on Twenty-second street. They were followed by a crowd of hooters hangers-on of the district. Detectives Birns and Sloop, who were two blocks away, started toward the disturbance and proceeded to halt, announcing he was an officer. Someone in the crowd is reported to have shouted "Look out, there's a cop here."

Amert and Merrill drew their revolvers at this point and began shooting, according to Captain Ryan. The four other officers, who were likewise looking on from groaning on the sidewalk.

Detective Sloop, Birn's partner, asserted he did not recognize in the crowd any member of the morals squad. The identities of these investigators, who have made raids in all parts of the city and in some instances have accused the morality of the regular police, is not generally known.

Morals Squad Arouses Enmity. Birns fell in the first fusillade and by the time the two detectives, from the Twenty-second street station arrived three officers and a fireman who was looking on were groaning on the sidewalk.

Detective Sloop, Birn's partner, asserted he did not recognize in the crowd any member of the morals squad. The identities of these investigators, who have made raids in all parts of the city and in some instances have accused the morality of the regular police, is not generally known.

WOMAN NOT CALLED

Mrs. Carman May Be Indicted in Minor Degree. BAIL WILL BE ACCEPTED. Prosecutor Says if Prisoner is Accused of Less Offense Than Murder He Will Favor Release in $20,000.

MINEOLA, N. Y., July 16.—The grand jury which has been investigating the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey in the office of Dr. Edwin Carman at Freeport ended its investigation today without having given Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman, wife of the physician, now under arrest in connection with the crime, an opportunity to tell her story. Mineola officials expect an indictment in the case tomorrow. It was late in the day when the grand jury announced it would hand up its finding to Justice Van Slicen in the criminal branch of the Supreme Court tomorrow.

Expectation of an indictment also was based on reports persistent in the courthouse after the grand jury adjourned. An indictment, if one were found, it was said, would be likely to charge Mrs. Carman not with murder but with manslaughter in the first degree.

Various other reports regarding the grand jury's probable action were in circulation after that body's adjournment. District Attorney Smith declined to deny one of these, to the effect that no indictment had been found. It developed that this refusal was in line with the official reticence determined on all those connected with the case having been pledged to secrecy.

Prisoner Waits Anxiously. Mrs. Carman spent the day anxiously awaiting a summons that would take her to the Courthouse, but none came. Dr. Carman spent the day sitting in a corridor of the Courthouse hoping that the grand jury would grant his wife's request and hear her.

"I cannot divulge the decision of the grand jury. It is not proper for me to do so," said the District Attorney. "In case an indictment charging Mrs. Carman with a lesser degree of homicide than murder in the first degree is reported I will be perfectly satisfied to have her released on $20,000 bail for trial. I think such a sum is sufficient."
