

CUTTER SAILS TO SAVE KARLUK CREW

Skipper of Exploring Vessel on Board Bear, Now Bound for Wrangell Island.

DOGS AND SLEDS TAKEN

Friends of Marooned Party Not Concerned for Safety—Members Expected to Be Returned to Homes by Canada.

NOME, Alaska, July 24.—The United States revenue cutter "Bear" sailed for Point Barrow today. After delivering the mail at Point Barrow she will proceed to Wrangell Island to take off the Eskimo men, three Eskimo women and one Eskimo woman from Stefansson's wrecked exploring ship Karluk, who have been on the island since March 19, their ship having been crushed by the ice two months earlier.

On the Bear are Captain Robert A. Bartlett, former master of the Karluk, who left the camp of the castaways last March and made his way to North Cape and across Siberia to Bering Sea with a dog team and an Eskimo companion; Mr. Shields, of the United States Bureau of Education; Rev. Mr. Hope; Mr. Train, a moving picture man, and Mr. Hersey. The two last named have been with the Bear since she left Seattle and will accompany the ship to Wrangell Island.

Dogs and Sleds Taken Along. Captain Cochran, of the Bear, took dogs from Nome and will pick up others in Siberia. He has sleds and every appliance needed for a dash over the ice if a landing on the island from boats cannot be effected.

Wrangell Island is 575 miles northwest of Nome in a straight line. Unless she encounters heavy ice the Bear should reach Point Barrow in 10 days. The length of time required for the voyage cannot be estimated because of uncertainty as to ice conditions. The ice in the Arctic this summer is reported unusually bad. Wrangell Island is always beset by ice. The Bear, which has for years made one cruise a year from Nome to Point Barrow and return, is accounted as good an ice boat as exists, always excepting Amundson's Fram, which was specially built for Arctic exploration.

Party Harassed as Safe. Friends of the persons marooned on Wrangell Island are not fearful of their safety. With the return of Summer great numbers of wild birds should have arrived on the island, affording a change of diet. Even during the winter the explorers, with their teams of dogs, probably were able to travel about freely and at will.

So far as known there is no intention of seeking to reunite the two wings of the Stefansson expedition. It is expected that the Karluk's white men will be brought to Seattle and sent to their homes in Canada and Europe at the expense of the Canadian government.

DR. JAMES W. BROUGHER TELLS CLASSES AT WHITE TEMPLE.

Robbers entered the home of C. E. Gatke, 709 Girard street, while Mrs. Gatke was visiting a neighbor last night. The loot consisted of a gold bracelet, engraved "F. G.," a string of gold beads and a savings bank containing about $1. Detectives Graddock and Vaughn are working on the case. Alex McDonald, a fireman, 23 years old, was arrested at Second and Couch streets by Detectives Collins and Smith on a charge of stealing a watch from Thomas Fowler. He was charged with larceny from the person.

Stamp Sales Gain $100 Day

One hundred dollars a day has been the average increase in stamp sales for the Portland Postoffice for the first 22 days of July over the same period for last year. Figures compiled yesterday show that on July 22 the total sales for the month this year were $65,596.23, as against $63,015.38 last year, or a gain of $2,580.85.

'ST. PETER'S DOME' IN DEAL

Land Faces Columbia and Highway, Cost About $40,000, and Will Be Developed Both for Beauty and Its Power.

The willingness of the voters of Multnomah, Clatsop, Columbia, Wasco and Hood River counties to subscribe money to finance the construction of the Columbia River Highway is said to have actuated J. M. Reynolds, of New Mexico, in the purchase from the Grand View Land Company yesterday of 672 acres fronting on the Columbia River, between Oneonta Gorge and Cascade Locks.

The consideration involved in the deal is understood to have been between $40,000 and $50,000, making it one of the largest recent cash sales of acreage.

Property Fronts on River.

The sale was handled through Lueddeman, Raley & Co., by Charles L. Wheeler, who inspected many properties with Mr. Reynolds before the latter decided upon the Columbia River tract. The property has a frontage on the Columbia River of about three miles, running from the Oneonta Gorge to the mouth of the river. It is a magnificent view property and is the only large tract of that character lying between the mountains and the river along the Columbia between Portland and Hood River. It includes a large dairy farm of 325 acres, which is being operated, and 150 acres of open land. The property is in "St. Peter's Dome," one of nature's wonders along the Columbia. The Columbia River Highway passes through the property.

Coast Appeals to Banker.

Mr. Reynolds is a banker from Albuquerque, N. M. While on a visit to the Coast with Mr. Reynolds, they became enamored of Portland and the adjacent country and decided to make an investment here. Mr. Reynolds has some extensive plans for the improvement of the property, to make it one of the beauty spots along the Columbia. A large dwelling house and other buildings are now located on the property. He is having these renovated and prepared for immediate occupancy. Unless the banker's refusal to be questioned by the committee, it is expected that the President will withdraw the nomination and select another banker for the post.

AUTO TRIP ENDS IN FIGHT

Chauffeurs Arrested for an Alleged Attack Upon Passenger.

William Smith, Harry Lea and Frank Rodman, three chauffeurs, were arrested at Sixth and Stark streets last night by Captain Clarke, Sergeant Colquhoun and Patrolman McCulloch on a charge of disorderly conduct by attacking William Ramsey, a traveling man. Ramsey told the police that he engaged an automobile from Rodman for $2 an hour. Later the pair quarreled over the bill, Ramsey says. The other chauffeurs joined in the fight and Ramsey was left unconscious in the street.

FISHERMAN FINDS BODY

Corpse, Thought to Have Been That of A. Paul, is Rescued.

The body of an unidentified man, evidently a laborer, was found floating in the Columbia River, near Vancouver, Wash., yesterday. The man was found by a fisherman. He tied the body to a stump on the Oregon shore and notified Coroner Limber, of Vancouver. Mr. Limber ordered the body to be taken to the morgue. It was thought the remains may be that of A. Paul, a painter, who fell from the railroad bridge last month and was drowned.

CAPTAIN MILLER IS DEAD

Columbia River Pioneer Navigator Succumbs in Spokane.

SPokane, Wash., July 24.—Captain J. D. Miller, one of the three pioneer Columbia River steamboat men who have been in the Northwest for half a century, died here today at his home. He was 84 years old. Captain Miller, 25 years ago, dropped his steamer, the Pend d'Oreille, through the Box Canyon by leading it to trees as it passed through the rapid to prove to the Government that the river could be navigated. He crossed the plains in 1848 with his parents and first settled at Oregon City. He was 84 years old.

NEW TRAFFIC PLAN IS UP

Steel Guides Set Flush With Surface at Intersections Proposed.

A round steel diagram set in the pavement flush with the surface is the latest arrangement devised to regulate traffic on intersections of the West Side business district, where there are no car tracks. The diagram would be three feet in diameter, having painted around the rim the words "Keep to Your Right," so placed that they can be read by autoists approaching in any direction.
