RACE HISTORY IS RECITED

Successive Invasions of Other Sections of Ireland Said to Have Left Imprint on Character, but North Separate Entity.

BY TIMOTHY J. O'CONNOR.

DUBLIN, July 27.—E. B. Osborn, the historian, has given some facts which differentiate the Ulstermen from other Irishmen. At this particular moment a study of the race characteristics of the property of the proper study of the race characteristics of Irishmen is not without interest. Mr. Osborn says: I wonder how many of our Parliament men could fill even half a sheet of note paper with authentic facts bearing on the history of Ulster? Probably not one in 10; for all sorts and conditions of politicians, Unionists and Separatists alike, still accept the popular theory that Ireland is inhabited by two distinct races, the one of Saxon origin settled in the north, and the other of Celtic extraction living in the south and west, and as long as this fallacy possesses their minds the whole history of "John Bull's Other Island" is for them a closed book. In point of fact, there are not two In point of fact, there are not two races in Ireland; the whole population is a mixture of Celtic and Teutonic elements, and Huxley's assertion that there is no racial difference between the native of Devonshire and the native of Tipperary might have been extive of Tipperary might have been ex-tended to take in the Uisterman. There was never a time when the "real Uistermen" did not feel themselves a people apart from the men of the rest of Ireland, and were not in the habit of facing eastward along the short, much-traveled waterway which is the much-traveled waterway which is the road to and from Scotland. One of the oldest Irish sayings of the times when there were five provinces in Ireland has it that Ulster is the thumb on the hand, as it were, and able to grip and hold back the four fingers, Leinster, Munster, Connaught and Meath.

"In particular, our demand for the participation of the Austro-Hungarian authorities in investigations to detect accomplices in the conspiracy on Servian territory has been rejected, while our request that measures be taken against that section of the Servian press hostile to Austria-Hungary has been declined, and our wish that the Servian Government take the necessary measures to prevent the dissoived Austrophobe associations continuing thele activity under another name and the setting the s Ulster Principality Apart.

"Since the claims in the Austrian-Hungarian note of July 23, regard being had to the attitude hitherto adopted by Servia, representing the minimum of what is necessary for the establishment of permanent peace with the Southeastern monarchy, the Servian answer must be regarded as unsatisfactory.

"That the Servian Covernment is the eye heavenward.

If Ireland had been mountainous in the center instead of along the circumference, her history must have been different; for then the interior would have been a great citadel of mountaineers and perhaps as unconquerable as Switzerland; but her rich and pleasant central plain, inhabited by a soft and easy-going race of men, such as is invariably found in a moist, mellow clianswer must be regarded as unsatisfactory.

"That the Servian Government itself is conscious that its note is not acceptable to us is proved by the circumstance that it proposes at the end of the note to submit the disputs to arbitration—an invitation which is thrown

The South and West of this long-suffering land is indeed a territory which has been the prey of successive invaders, who have in their turn been subdued by the green comfort and tender skies of their new habitation. The blood of the dwellers in this central plain, perhaps the richest in the Western World, has never had but the one defense—the beauty of the soft-eyed women, with rose white skins and singing voices, which is as frequent in such climates as wild-flowers by the wayside. The cold and bracing climate of this stark, mountainous northeast corner, a veritable sea of hills within, necessarily produced a sturdier and more virile stock than was ever found in any of the other provinces, and it is not surprising to find that Ulster reber of police received injuries while mained practically unconquered up to repressing the demonstrators, of whom 1603 and almost exclusively Celtic much more so than any other part of Ireland—except in a ribbon of terri-tory along the coast of Down, where the Normans had found a footing.

the Russian Emperor left Monday hight for Finland and adds:

"Now that matters have become caimer, I may quote a sentence used by the Emperor at the close of a grand council on Saturday—'We have stood this sort of thing for seven and a half years: that is enough.'

"Thereupon His Majesty authorized orders for partial mobilization confined to the Fourteenth Army Corps on the Austrian frontier. At the same time an intimation was given to Germany that orders for the mobilization of the Russian army would follow immediately upon mobilization by Germany.

"These words and acts were believed to be largely responsible for the sudden change in the international situation. The general impression in diplomatic circles is that Austria has gained so much by Servin's almost complete so much by Servia's almost complet acceptance of the terms of the ulti-matum that it is difficult to believe she would risk war with Russia and European conflagration by driving Servia to the wall."
