Dr. L. Ricen Intimates Anxiety to Vindicate Glory of Arms Responsible for War.

SOLDIERY IS CRITICISED

Czar Declared to Have Inherited and Grandfather,

After its humiliating defeat by Japan, Rusela has been looking for an casion to vindicate the honor and glory of her arms. This entanglement between Servia and Austria served her good purpose. Russia took advantage of the situation and offered her assistance to her brother Slavs, but her help is not wanted. Russia is forcing her help on the Servians today for her own selfish purposes as she did with the Bulgarians in 1877-78,

If Russia annexes Servia, the latter will be much worse off under the Russian government than under the Austrian, but is Russia going to come out victorious in this war with Germany and Austria?

Although this is difficult to foretell positively, it is highly probable that Russia will lose, provided Germany does not repeat the mistake of Napoleon and does not go too far into the interior of Russia. All things being equal, the Russian army does not stand any show at all in a conflict with the

Germany has more in common with France than with Russia, as they are both civilized nations, and they could accomplish a great deal more by working hives money and time without any lore of the admits after the admit of t

They also have a clear idea of duty, that idea of "Pflicht," which is largely the cause of the present greatness of Germany and which helped them greatly to come out victorious in 1871. This is not so with the Russians.

In the first place, the Russians have never been known for their warlike spirit. The masses are nothing but timert, good-natured semi-barbarians, who would be only too glad to be left alone to till their soil in their primitive way and pursue peaceful occupations. It is next to impossible to teach a Russian peasant order and system. From early childhood the Russian witnesses the lawlessness and arbitrariness of his government and by the time.
