"Pat-a-cake, pat-a-cake, baker's man, Bake a cake as fast as you can." 'Twill be all baked and iced in less than an hour. For her a strict user of Olympic flour. Now the funny old woman who sells up so high. A-sweeping the cobwebs all out of the sky. Would find she could cover a great deal more room. down once, and buy a Zan broom.

Peter, Peter, Pumpkin-eater, Had a wife and couldn't keep her. But fed on Otter claims each day. She said, at once, that she would stay. Little Tommy Tucker sings for his supper. What shall we give him, plain bread and butter? No, but a glass of rich Purity Cream. And a whole box of Haradon's Biscuit supreme.

The busy old woman who lived in the shoe. And had so many children she didn't know what to do. Would find she could manage her household with ease. If she would but use Preferred Stock Groceries.

Curly Locks, Curly Locks, will thou be mine? Thou shalt not wash dishes nor yet feed the swine. But sit on a cushion and sew a fine seam.

Drink Golden West Coffee, and rich Holly Cream.

Tom, Tom, the Piper's Son, Stole a pig and away he run. But, if his parents he had had, He'd not have done a thing so bad. For with Columbia Ham each day, The pig he'd not want anyway.

—Susan C. Erwin, 502 Franklin Avenue, Astoria, Oregon.

SECOND PRIZE, $2.

Two pretty little bungalows, side by side. Two sweet little brides of a few months. One is happy from morning till night. The other may often be found in tears.

"Why," says the first, "what is the matter? What are you crying about?" After some coaxing the answer comes: "Tom says he wishes he had stayed with his mother; she can cook. I have sour bread, heavy pancakes, mouldy ham, stale cookies and cracker-coffee, and nothing fit to eat."

"What kind of flour do you use?"

"Oh, anything they send up."

"Why don't you insist on Oregon products? They are always fresh and good." Try Olympic flour, Albers' pancake flour, Golden West coffee, Haradon's Supreme biscuits, the Preferred Stock groceries.

"All right," said the other; "but I did not know about all these things."

"Then," said the first, "you don't read The Oregonian, one of the greatest of our Oregon products."

So the tearful little bride subscribed for the paper, first carefully consulted it, and now there are two happy and contented couples in the adjacent houses.—Dorothy Raud, 606 Park street, Hood River, Or.

THIRD PRIZE, $1.

The great cry, "war" high prices, should not alarm the average Oregonian. Why should it? If conditions are met in a sensible, loyal, business-like way. We have it in our power to produce enough for our own people and also open a splendid trade abroad.

Every inch of Oregon is prodigal in its output; her shores abound in foodstuffs, her mountains provide us gold and lumber, her fertile soil, fruit, vegetables, grains and cattle.

If, one year ago, the people had heeded and read with interest the call of the Home Industry Department of The Oregonian, "Be loyal to your state," and "Support home industries," our factories would now be in a more flourishing condition, with more men employed and more money in circulation, and we would enjoy a much more secure business footing. As time goes on, more heed the call and realize its real meaning.

In our household we have obtained valuable shopping information by studying these advertisements; we have saved time and money and today we know when Albers' cereals, Golden West coffee, Holly milk, Otter claims, Columbia ham, Golden West coffee, Holly milk and Otter claims.

Portland, the bright star of Oregon, has a population of 207,274. There are a good many manufacturing plants in Portland, too.

Although Oregon has grown a good deal in the last 60 years, our crop and stock raising, as well as many undeveloped resources, we, its citizens, must help it.

We must stop this fight of Oregon dollars into other states. —Grace Mathews, 3107 62d Avenue S. E., Portland.

Being an Oregonian born, fed on Oregon products, I can speak with authority. I weight 15 pounds, am well and strong.

The reasons why I Because Oregon goods are suitable and easy for mamma to cook. We had a visitor from the State of Washington and she was delighted with the meals of course, I helped with the cooking. Breakfast was served from Albers' Flapjack, Columbia Ham, Golden West Coffee, with biscuits made with Olympic flour and Diamond Baking Powder. Lunch was served, a bowl of Otter clam broth, with Supreme Soda Crackers, and Columbia Butter. Then followed Preferred Stock canned peaches, with whipped Holly Milk, and a glass of Purity milk.

It is a beautiful Summer day in 1854 and a long line of white covered wagons are making their way through the wild and beautiful valley of the Willamette River. The occupants of these wagons are courageous men and women, who are going to make their homes in the fertile state of Oregon.

Fifty-eight years have passed since that day, and it is 1914. Oregon is now a prosperous state, with many towns and manufacturing plants, which are out many things in foodstuffs. Among the best of these are: Haradon's Supreme soda, Columbia ham, Albers' Flapjack flour, Golden West coffee, Holly milk and Otter claims.

TOTS SEE WAR LOSSES

CHILDREN ARGUE FOR SUPPORT OF INDUSTRIES OF OREGON.

Two Essayists in The Oregonian's Contest Think the State's Resources Should Be Strengthened.

The economic relation of Oregon industry to the war was one of the themes that captured the imagination of the young writers in The Oregonian's Home Industry Essay Contest for August.

Two of the best essays along this line were those of Luther Meadows, 250 Salmon street, which took a prize, and Katherine R. Spess, of 264 1/2 East Morrison street. Luther argues that by patronizing Oregon industries those industries will be strengthened and Oregon thus will be able to supply her own needs, independent of outside sources that may be cut off by war. Katherine imagines a reservist who has gone from Oregon and is fighting in one of the European armies, and pictures his longing for some of the wholesome Oregon-made products.

The first prize went to Susan C. Erwin, a bright little Astorian of 10 years, who has an aptitude for rhyming, and whose parodies, "Mother Goose Hoists Oregon Products," are one of the cleverest contributions entered in the 11 months of the essay contest.

Dorothy Raud, of Hood River, took second prize with a short story that gives promise that some day she will be a regular contributor to the leading magazines. She tells how a domestic tragedy was averted by the made-in-Oregon gospel.

Luther Meadows' essay on the war's relation to Oregon industry was the winner of third prize. The fourth prize was taken by Lillian T. Jones, 455 Fifth street, who marshalled her logic and facts clearly and concisely to tell why Oregon people should do all their buying of Oregon manufacturers, all else being equal.

Grace Mathews, 6107 Sixty-second avenue, Southeast, took fifth prize with a well-written essay which contrasted conditions of Oregon pioneer times with those of today.

Others whose essays are deserving of special mention are: Louisa Domain, Portland; Lavin May, Portland; Lula Meloy, Moro, who took a prize last week; Helen M. Vandermost, Beaverton; C. Von Cleff, Evelyn Tillman, Portland; and Ruth Blowers, Hood River.

Train Drowns Robber's Work.

KELSO, Wash., Aug. 30.—(Special).—Breaking through a plate-glass window while the passing train was drowning the sound of the falling glass, a robber last night entered Remick's hardware store and stole a number of revolvers, knives and cartridges. This is the second time in the past year that the Remick store has been entered by thieves.
