WHAT ANNE RIPPENHOUSE SAYS

Colored Velvet to Break the Monotony of Black and White.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—Some one here with a knack for figuring has reasoned that about two-thirds of the new hats are toques, and one-third are large hats.

So you have it entirely within your own power to choose whether you shall be one of the majority or one of the minority. The only thing to influence your choice ought to be the type of hat you prefer. If large hats are more becoming than small ones, be with the one-third. If the toque suits you, choose that.

Incidentally, be it said that prediction has it that by mid-Winter there will be many more large hats than small ones.

Some of the colored velvet hats are bound with heavy ribbon. For the woman economically inclined, this binding is a boon. For the edge of a velvet hat soon looks shabby, and the ribbon binding serves as a durable protection.

Metallic ribbons and flowers are almost as prevalent as the velvet hats themselves. They are especially well suited for combination with velvet. Huge gold and silver roses and bands of gold and silver ribbon are used, and often a strand or narrow gold or silver ribbon or cord is wound around the crown of a small velvet toque, or around the stem of an ostrich feather, the flues being pushed aside here and there to make room for the ribbon.

Then there are kid and leather flowers, and shiny leather foliage used with silk and velvet flowers—black leather foliage. This is for black foliage has also brought about the use of black velvet foliage with colored flowers.

Ribbon is used in the form of big bows on some of the velvet hats, and shaded ribbon of a contrasting color is fastened out at the ends, or shaded ribbon, for instance, or shaded silk on a gray velvet hat.

All sorts of Feather Fancies. Feather fancies of all sorts are used, and one of a band of coque fastened upstanding about the brim of a big black velvet sailor, the coque feathers shading from light to dark of any desired color.

Ostrich in many odd new forms appears. Sometimes four tiny plumes fattened out at the ends, are arranged like the four petals of a flower about a black and yellow velvet center. Ostrich flues are mingled with the petals of silk and velvet roses most effectively and these feathery flowers are used to encircle the crown or brim of a sailor shape in velvet.

The helmet hat is coming in for a good deal of attention. It is decidedly smart. And its very name makes it appropriate to war days.

SCHOOL LUNCH BASKET.

What to put in the school lunch basket is the all-absorbing problem of mothers now that school days are approaching. After three months of home luncheons it is difficult to reconcile a small boy or girl to a basket of edibles, a necessarily limited variety of edibles.

Most children dislike to be burdened with a lunch basket which must be carried home every day, and the wise housewife has a collection of empty pasteboard boxes for this purpose, cracker packages being most useful. An assortment of wrapping paper, plenty of string or a pile of paper napkins and some paraffine paper will simplify the task of packing the lunch each morning.

Careful mothers will not give children pennies and nickels with which to purchase cakes and candies at noon, as their selection of sweets is seldom in accordance with the laws of digestion. Such fruits as bananas, oranges and apples are easily packed, and are better for a school child than rich cake and pie. Occasionally, hard-boiled or deviled eggs, accompanied by plain bread and butter, may be substituted for cold meat.

Light, moist, chicken salad can easily be put into the lunch basket and sometimes pickles and olives vary the midday school menu. A small piece of potato or chicken salad can easily be put into the lunch basket and sometimes pickles and olives vary the midday school menu.

As it is imperative that this list be ready up by the middle of the month, Mrs. Harper's visit to Portland can be delayed but a few days at most.

THE NEED OF CLAIRVOYANCE IN MARRIAGE.

"A LOT of clairvoyance and fun is poked into marriage," observed the Common Sense woman, "but it strikes me that married people possessed this sixth sense, as it is called, there would be less trouble and friction in married life."

"You need more than six senses to get along peaceably in a marriage," said the Old Maid. "You need a baker's dozen and then some."

"The more enlightenment, the better," admitted the Common Sense woman. "It helps to a larger understanding of each other is a good thing. And that is the reason I say clairvoyance ought to be cultivated. An incident I heard of yesterday set me to thinking of it."

"One can hear plenty of incidents of mix until it is smothered with a tabby of two-thirds of a pound of butter, one-sixth cup of salad dressing, salt, pepper and vinegar to taste. Refill whites and pin halves together with a toothpick."

Apple salad—Take firm, tart apples, cut into dice and add enough celery mix until it is smooth with a tablespoon of melted butter, one-sixth cup of salad dressing, salt, pepper and vinegar to taste. Refill whites and pin halves together with a toothpick.

YOU'RE wanted on the phone, Miss Winthrop. Just as popular as always, I see," said Mrs. Kerr, keeper of the uptown boarding-house in New York to which Marian had returned from force of habit.

It was the morning after Marian's return from Atlantic City. Depositing a paper weight on her pile of writing paper, Marian will open the telephone. She was uncomfortably afraid, yet rebelliously desirous, that it was Chalmers calling up. And it was.

"Oh, yes, there was," returned Marian unhesitatingly. "A very great need of it. My decision was final. So there was no need of making matters any worse, any harder, for yourself and for me."

"Don't be so tragic," laughed Chalmers. "I'm not," denied Marian. "I'm merely trying to avert a tragedy."

"Well, I'm here to help—whatever it is. I insist on the traditional two heads being better than one in a matter like this. When may I see you?"

"I repeat that you mustn't."

OREGON FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS

By SARAH EVANS PREE.

HOW the war in Europe could even disrupt a small lunch party in Portland was made manifest when the officers of the Oregon Federation had to cancel invitation to a small luncheon in honor of Mrs. William Harper, of Washington, who was to be received in this room tomorrow, so you better listen to all I have to tell.

"To begin with, today my little mother's father took two little girls and my little mother in the automobile and I went with them, though the nurse tried to get the little mother to leave me at home. But her father held her back, and she said: 'Let her take Drusilla along.'"

"We drove to a place where there were some tents and we all got out and went in the biggest one. Bobby Jones, you never heard such a noise, it was just awful."

"I saw an awful big Teddy Bear in a cage, and one animal had such a long neck that I did not find his head at all. There was another animal there, the queerest looking creature, he looked as though he was turned around, his tail was right on his face and he had little eyes. I don't believe he ever saw the whole of himself, his eyes were so small. But he could make a noise dear."

"But how can I play circus?" asked Bobby. "I am not an animal, am I?"

"Oh, you will be something I saw in a side show, a Punch and Judy they call it, you look just like the Punch."

"What did he have to do?" asked Bobby.

"Oh, he talked and he wasn't very nice to his wife, and a policeman carried him off."

"Oh, good-by," said Bobby, thinking of the time Drusilla was arrested, "then I shall have an adventure."

"The wedding was at Chicago, Mr. Moulton's home. Miss Lively's home is at Morrison, Ill. The young couple went in Chicago."

Mr. Moulton is a nephew of Mrs. F. A. Harmon, of this city. He is deaf, but learned lip reading as a child. He visited in Baker last year with the Holden party of agricultural experts which was waging a propaganda for more alfalfa in the Pacific Northwest.

"They did not do anything," said Drusilla with a toss of her head, "they did not even speak."

"I guess I better look over my wardrobe," said the paper doll, closing her blinds.

"Isn't she the concealed creature?" said Drusilla. "I don't suppose she will be in the circus at all. I don't see any one that looked the least bit like her."

"Was that all?" asked Bobby.

"No, there was a lot more," said Drusilla. "Funny men who stood on their heads and monkeys riding on a splendid time ever saw. Oh, we had a splendid time and everybody laughed."

"What did they laugh at?" asked Bobby.

"Oh, I don't just know, but it was awfully good. You will see tomorrow," Drusilla told him.

SPECULATORS ARE HIT NOW

Street Improvement Remonstrants Worry to Commission.

Whether or not persons who own property they do not occupy are to be permitted to remonstrate on street improvement proceedings favored by the majority of actual residents on the street affected is a question now confronting the City Commission.

The question came up yesterday in the form of a remonstrance against an improvement on the East Side. While the majority of people living on the street favored the improvement, the holding of actual residents for speculative purposes and not residing on the street had sufficient property to knock out the improvement.

Commissioner Bigelow contended that the actual residents, if in the strong majority, should rule, while Commissioner Lusk contended that the majority of such a plan, inasmuch as the same question is involved in a number of cases now pending, the adoption of a definite policy is expected within a short time.

FACE FULL OF PIMPLES AND SPOTS

Would Pain, Itched and Burned. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In Two Months Was Well.

4240 So. California Ave., Chicago, Ill.—"About a year ago my face was full of pimples and red spots. To sleep one night without itching was almost impossible. Some of the pimples would get big and red and if I touched them they would pain, while others would get white heads on them and when they broke open some matter came out. It would burn and itch and I scratched them so that sometimes they would break and bleed. That always caused them to be worse."

"I bought all kinds of salves and creams and I found out that they did me no good. I noticed the Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertisement and I sent for a free sample. I started to use them that night. I went to the drug store and bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and some Cuticura Ointment and I found the pimples were drying out. In two months I was well." Film Managers Agree to Preface War Pictures With Warning.

Complying with a request of Mayor Albee, managers of motion picture film exchanges have attached to films showing war scenes the caption "Please Refrain From Demonstrations." The caption is considered necessary to prevent demonstrations which might lead to trouble between natives of the countries involved.

Request was sent out recently throughout the country by President Wilson to the effect that Americans should show their neutrality in every possible way. Mayor Albee said he considered the demonstrations over the motion pictures a serious matter and asked for co-operation of the film exchanges.
