With her choice lying between the promptings of love and escape and exile through avenues that were rapidly ly closing with the progress of war, Miss Gertrude White, of Portland, its Gertrude White, of Portland yielded to the pleadings of her fiance. Hugo Altschul, an Austrian, and became his bride August 9.

The wedding was solemnized in a quaint old synagogue 624 years old in Prague, the family of the bridegroom being the only guests. Miss White, who has been traveling and studying music abroad for the past two years, was in Vienna attending to the preparation of her trousseau, the wedding date having been set for September 27, when the command was issued that all Americans must leave the country at once.

Immediate Wedding Determined.

Mins White hastened to the home of her fiance in Prague, a trip usually consuming six hours, but which took her 36 hours, and after a hurried consultation with relatives, an immediate wedding was decided upon.

A postal card to the bride's brother, I. L. White, of this city, told the news. It was written by the bride on August 13, from Prague, four days after the wedding, and in the same post a letter dated July 31 from the same post a letter dated July 31 from the same post a letter dated July 31 from the same post a letter dated July 31 from the same post a letter dated July 31 from the same post a letter dated July 31 from the same post a letter dated July 31 from the same post a letter dated July 31 from the same post a letter dated July 31 from the same post a letter dated July 31 from the same post a letter dated July 31 from the same post a letter dated July 31 from the same post a letter dated July 31 from the schools credit was given on the school reports for garden activity.
