When the cardinal appeared on the balcony he was faced by a dense crowd, stretching from one end of the avenue to the other. He stood between John E. Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, and T. P. O'Connor, with John Dillon, the bishop of Southwark and many distinguished Catholic laymen grouped around.

It follows: "September 6th.—The Southward advance of the German right reached extreme points at Coulommiers and Provins. This movement was covered by a large flanking force west of the line of the river Ourcq. The Southward movement of enemy left his right wing in a dangerous position, as he had evacuated the Creil-Senlis-Complement of the havoc wrought by the Germans throughout his archdiocese, In London he learned that his sister and three nephews were among the refugees from Beigium.

At the outburst the cardinal was overcome with smotion and tears rolled down his cheeks as he stood with outstretched arms.

The procession occupied an hour in passing, and when the first section halted, the cardinal commanded silence. Then, raising his hand, he shouted: "God save Ireland."

This was the signal for a fresh roar of cheers and the crowd shouted back: "God save Belgium!"

After the procession passed Mr. O'Connor read an address signed by Mr. Redmond, on behalf of the Irish people, as follows:

Today sees the termination of a week of vigorous campaigning for the Visiting Nurse Association and in the seven hours in which booths will be open in the downtown section of Portland society will solicit memberships to this worthy organization. From 425 the membership is expected to leap to more than 1000 and many hundreds of dollars in donations will be received, if anticipations are realized.

At 10 o'clock this morning 16 booths in office buildings, hotels and department stores will be opened for the reception of donations and memberships, particularly the latter. They will close at 5 o'clock, but by this time it is hoped to have raised at least $5000.

Voluntary Aid Expected.

There will be no solicitation of memberships today, as it is expected that the agitation of the committee in charge this past week should be sufficient to have aroused the itnerest necessary to make the work a success. Memberships will be sold for $10, $5 and $3 a year, so that a membership may be within the reach of modest purses. Straight donations will be received also, but it is the yearly membership pledge that the Visiting Nurse Association desires, for it is this that insures a permanent contributing membership for years to come.
