Portland's young folk - 25,247 - paraded through a refreshing drizzle to opening of the Fall semester

In response to the rollcalls in the city schools, 1583 more students answered "Here!" than in the first day of school last year. All existing records are broken by the size of attendance.

broken by the size of attendance. With some faces wreathed in smiles, and others almost wet with tears, de-pending upon temperament and the pleasures of the Summer past, the young people, from timid 6 years of age, entering upon a school career, to the dignified high school senior, made preliminary arrangements for the sca-son's work yesterday.

Greetings Occupy Morning.

School routine was not tiresome to Portland's future citizens yesterday, for only a morning session was held, and that was devoted to the interesting activities of meeting old friends and new teachers, finding classrooms, and new teachers, finding classrooms, and obtaining lists of books to be purchased later after application to the parenta' purse. Even this informal session wa-broken into in most of the schools by brief patriotic exercises in commemo-ration of the 100th anniversary of the writing of the "Star-Spangled Banner." The life of Francis Scott Key was spoken of by the teachers and the pu-plis joined in the singing of the famous old song.

Hook-Getting is Begun. While many took their book lists home to get parental approval and behome to get parental approval and be-sleged bookstores in the afternoon, others went directly from school to the stores, where they made their ex-changes and purchases. It is believed that more new textbooks were bought this year than ever before in the his-tory of the Fortland department be-cause of changes in textbooks in the cause of changes in textbooks in the new courses of study. Allowances on old books turned in for new ones were made by special ar-rangement with publishers and the ex-changes, established in 50 bookstores in the city, spent a busy day. Many a répresentative of that great class, the "tired business man," smiled reminiscently yesterday morning when the strestcars they boarded for work became crowded with short, chubby kiddies fearfully clasping slates, and tail, alim lads wearing looks of bore-dom.

High School Girls Admired.

High School Girls Admired. Misses of high school age, charming with their vivacious air and fresh, clear complexions, drew many glances of admiration and envy from the women folk on their way to store, office or shopping tour. Some of the men, mar-ried, fat and 50, might have been for-given the remark one was heard to utter, "H'm, I wish I was back in high school again, if that's a sample of what attends!" H. H. The general confusion incident to the opening of a school year in a large city will have calmed down today and the first lesson assignments will be given in earnest. As soon as they were freed from attendance yesterday morning the young people began a hunt for books, which will not end for a week or more for many, as the change in textbooks this year is sweeping.
